CHESSESS from A to Z

2001: A Space Odyssey

Movie made in 1968 by Stanley Kubrick. It features an astronaut, Dr. Frank Poole (Gary Lockwood), playing a chess game with the HAL-9000 computer. The game in the movie is from an actual game, Roesch vs. Schlage, Hamburg 1910. The initial position in the movie is after Black's 13th move. The astronaut says, "Umm...anyway, Queen takes pawn. OK?" HAL responds, "Bishop takes Knight's pawn." The astronaut says "Hmm, that's a good move. Er...Rook to King One." HAL responds, "I'm sorry Frank. I think you missed it. Queen to Bishop Three (this should have been Queen to Bishop Six). Bishop takes Queen (not forced). Knight takes Bishop. Mate." It is not a mate in two, but a mate in three. The astronaut responds, "Ah...Yeah, looks like you're right. I resign."

A Chess Dispute

This may have been the first movie with a chess scene. The movie was made in 1903 by R. W. Paul (Paul's Animatograph Works of England). Two men are playing chess in a restaurant. One man makes a move while the other man is distracted. When he looks back at the board he disputes the move. They get in a fight, in which both fall to the ground below the camera's view. Only their hats, boots, and some clothing being tossed in the air can be seen. Finally, the manager of the restaurant enters and lifts the two disheveled chess players into view.

A Game and Playe of Chesse

A book on chess published in 1474 and reputedly thesecondvolumeprintedintheEnglishlanguage brought $7600 at a Southeby's auction in 1946. "The Game and Playe of Chesse" by Jackobus De Cessolis, translated by William Caxton, once formed a portion of the library of Lord Cunliffe.

Abreu, Jorge D.

Jorge Abreu (1958-) is an International Master (1988) from the Dominican Republic.

Abu ‘l-fsth Shmsd sd-Dinjsri

In the 12th century Abu ‘l-fath Ahmad as-Sinjari was a player and author. Three copies of his manuscript was discovered in 1951, the earliest dating from 1665. The original was written 500 years earlier. The contents contain 10 opening system and 287 mansubat (problems). Three of his problems were based on the work of as-Suli. A mansuba is an Arabic term for a composed middle game or endgame position that is set for instruction or for solving.

Active Chess

Active chess (30 minutes per game) was introduced in 1987 by FIDE and was mostly used for demonstrations and other unofficial events. The first official Active Chess (30 minutes per game) tournament was held in Gijon, Spain in 1988 and won by Karpov. Karpov, in December of 1988, won the World Active Championship (a FIDE event with 61 players) in Mazatlan, Mexico and received $50,000. The organizers of the event donated $100,000 for AIDS research. Initial attempts to organize a world championship for active chess was opposed by world champion Gary Kasparov. He was quoted as saying, "Active Chess? What does that make me, the Passive World Champion?" Later, Kasparov organized his own brand of fast chess, called "Rapid Chess" with a time control of 25 minutes a game. This name and event was adopted by FIDE in 1989 so as not to imply an inactive chess title if FIDE awarded an Active Chess title.

Adabashev, Mark

Mark Adabashev (1908-1954) was a Russian chess composer. His chess problems are found in Sovetskaya Shakmatnaya Kompoziciya (Soviet Chess Composition), published in 1937. He started composing chess problems around 1926.

Adjournment

First introduced at Paris in 1878. Adjournment is a time out between playing sessions, generally overnight. The side that is on the move seals a legal move, sight unseen by his opponent. When play resumes, the sealed move is played on the board, and the game continues. Players were forbidden to analyze their games during adjournments, but this became difficult to enforce. In the 1930s analytical assistance by seconds became acceptable. Adjournments have now disappeared as players could consult with very strong chess computers.

Afghanistan

Chess was forbidden by the Taliban in Afghanistan for 15 years, possibly to prevent intellectuals from getting together. The Taliban believed chess as a form of gambling and it distracted people from saying their prayers. For five years, Afghanistan was the only place in the world where chess was illegal. There is only one master in Afghanistan, Ismail Ibrahim. There are only 7 players from Afghanistan that have a FIDE rating. Afghanistan first became affiliated with FIDE in 1984. In 1989, Afghanistan issued stamps with a chess motif (chess in Alfonso paintings). Afghanistan was temporally excluded from FIDE for non-payment of debt.

Ager Chessmen

Chessmen made of rock crystal that used to be preserved in a church in Ager, Spain. 96 pieces were made around 1071. Only a few pieces survive today. There is a myth that this chess set belonged to Charlemagne. It is also known as the Urgel or Urgell chess chessmen, a nearby village. Parts of these pieces are preserved in Lerida. 15 pieces reappeared in a public auction and purchased by the Emir of Kuwait. The collection was plundered by Iraqi soldiers during the Gulf War, but has since returned.

Ajeeb

The name of the chess automaton built by Charles A. Hopper, a Bristol cabinet-maker, in 1865. Several chess and checker masters (such as Albert Hodges, Ferdinand Burille, and Harry Pillsbury) operated the life-size Egyptian figure. Ajeeb was operated by a player of small physique concealed inside it. The hidden player was able to watch the game through a peephole near Ajeeb's naval. One opponent shot at Ajeeb after losing a game, wounding the operator. One of the operators of Ajeeb was chess and checker master Constant Ferdinand Burille. During his years as operator, he played over 900 games of chess and only lost 3 games. He never lost a single checker game. Pillsbury was its hidden operator from 1898 to 1904. When Ajeeb was on display in New York at the Eden Musee, it played checkers for a dime and chess for a quarter. In 1885, the manager of the Eden Musee allowed customers to play the automaton on Sunday. For that, he got arrested for violating the Sunday law. Opponents included Vice President Thomas Hendricks, Theodore Roosevelt, Houdini, Admiral Dewey, O. Henry, Frank Marshall, and Sarah Bernhardt. Ajeeb was 10 feet high. Ajeeb was first exhibited at the Royal Polytechnical Institute in London in 1868. It was lodged at the Crystal Palace between 1868 and 1876 and then went to the Royal Aquarium at Westminster until 1877. It was then taken to Berlin where over 100,000 saw it in three months at Castan's Panopticum. It came to New York in 1885. In 1915, the Edeb Musee closed down and Ajeeb was transferred to Coney Island. In 1936, Ajeeb toured the USA, promoting Radio Corporation of America (RCA). Charles Barker, US checkers champion, also worked Ajeeb, never losing a single game. Ajjeb disappeared during World War II.

Akesson, Ralf

Ralf Akesson (1961-) is a Swedish Grandmaster. He was European Junior Champion in 1980-81. He was Swedish Champion in 1985.

Akhmilovskaya-Donaldson, Elena Bronisklavovna

Woman Grandmaster (1977) from Tbilisi, Georgia who was the 1986 World Women's Championship challenger (losing to Maya Chiburdanidze with 1 win, 4 losses, and 9 draws). She was equal first in the 1988 challengers, but lost the playoff to Ioseliani. In 1988 she eloped with American International Master John Donaldson, captain of the US team, while playing in the chess Olympiad in Thessaloniki, Greece. At the time, she was the number two Soviet woman player. The two were married at the U.S. Consulate in Greece. She returned to the Soviet Union almost a year later to get her 7 year-old daughter. It took three weeks to secure their exit visas. Her mother, Lydia Akhmilovskaya, qualified several times for the USSR Women's Championship and was a top-ranked correspondence player. She later divorced John Donaldson and married IM Georgi Orlov. She was born in 1957 and died in 2012.

Akhsharumova-Gulko, Anna Markovna

Woman Grandmaster who finished first in the 1976 Soviet Women's Championship. Her husband, Boris Gulko, tied for first in the 1977 Soviet Men's Championship. By all rights, she should have won the 1983 Soviet Women's title played in Tallinn when she defeated her main competitor, Nana Ioseliani after she won by time forfeit. It would have given her 12 points to Nana's 11 points. The next day, Ioseliani filed a protest alleging a malfunction in the clock. Anna refused to play. The result of her game was arbitrarily reversed by the All-Union Board of Referees in Moscow, thereby forfeiting her title and ending up in 3rd place. She was the USSR Women's Champion in 1976 and 1984. She and her husband immigrated to the United States in 1986. She won the U.S. Women's championship in 1987 with a perfect 9-0 score. In 1990, she tied for 5th-6th place in the Genting Women's Interzonal. She was born in 1957.

Moorish poet-king who reigned over Seville in the late 11th century. He was regarded as a chess patron and kept several chess masters in his kingdom. In 1078 Alfonso VI and Ibn-Ammar, chess master in al_Mutamid's court, played a game of chess for the stake of Seville. Ibn-Ammar won and the city was spared from siege. Alfonso kept the chess set and board.

al-Mu'tasim Billah

al-Mu'tasim Billah (794-842) was the Caliph of Baghdad from 833 AD to 842 AD who composed the first chess problem in 840 (a mate in 9 moves). He was the 8th Abbasid caliph and a son of Harun al-Rashid, himself a good chess player.

Al-Rashid

Abbasid Caliph of Baghdad (786-809) who favored chess and granted liberal pensions to chess masters in his court around 800 A.D.

Aladdin

Aladdin (Ala'addin at-Tabrizi) was the strongest chess player at the end of the 14th century. He was also known as Ali Shatrangi (Ali the Chessplayer). He could successfully give odds to all other leading players and play up to 4 games simultaneously, while blindfolded. Some consider him the first world chess champion. He was also a lawyer and a scholar in the court of Tamerlane (1336-1405). Aladdin was Chinese. This is the same Aladdin in children's stories, but he never had a magic lamp or genie.

Alapin, Semyon Zinovievich

Russian chess master and openings analyst. He was born in Vilnius, Lithuania in 1856. He later settled in St. Petersburg, then Heidelberg,

Germany. While studying at St. Petersburg Engineering Institute, he became one of the strongest players in the city. In 1879, he tied for first in the Best Russian Players tournament in St. Petersburg, but lost the play-off to Chigorin. In 1880 and 1881, he lost a match against Chigorin. In 1893, he tied for 1st place in the championship of Berlin. In 1899, he drew a match with Schlechter in Vienna (+1-1=4). In 1902 he was ranked #8 in the world. In 1911, he won the championship of Munich. Alapin's Opening is 1.e4 e5 2.Ne2. The Sicilian, Alapin variation is 1.e4 c5 2.c3. Alapin's Gambit is 1.e4 e6 2.d4 d5 3.Be3. Alekhine, Alexander

Winner of the first Soviet Chess Championship (1920) and the only man to die while holding the world chess championship. He learned chess from his older brother Alexei (1888-1939). He studied law at the Sorbonne but failed to get his doctorate as he claimed. He married four times to women 20 to 30 years older than he. He was a prisoner of war like all the other chess contestants at an international tournament in Mannheim in 1914. In 1915 and 1916 he served in the Russian Red Cross. In 1918 he was a criminal investigator in Moscow. In 1919 he was imprisoned in the death cell at Odessa as a spy. In 1920 he was back in Moscow intending to be a movie actor. He also served as interpreter to the Communist party and was appointed secretary to the Education Department. In 1921 he married a foreign Communist delegate and left Russia for good. At the Sorbonne his thesis dealt with the Chinese prison system. In 1930 he scored the first 100% score in the Chess Olympiad, winning 9 games on board 1 for France. During World War II, he became a Nazi collaborator and declared he was ready to sacrifice his life for a Nazi Russia. He competed in seven tournaments in Germany during the war and wrote several pro-Nazi articles. During that time, Soviet players changed the name of Alekhine's Defense to the Moscow Defense. He died in Portugal after choking on an unchewed piece of meat. He was 53. Alekhine was not buried for three weeks because no one would claim the body. The Portuguese Chess Federation took charge of the funeral. Only 10 people showed up for his funeral. The funeral was delayed for five days until the Portuguese Chess Federation raised enough money to pay for his burial. In 1956 his remains were transferred to a cemetery in Paris. FIDE provided the tombstone in the shape of a chessboard. His birth and death date on the tombstone is wrong. The tombstone reads "ALEXANDER ALEKHINE 1ST NOVEMBER 1892 25TH MARCH, 1946 CHESS WORLD CHAMPION 1927-35-37 TO THE END". He was born on October 31, 1892 and died either on the evening of March 23rd or the morning of March 24th, 1946. He was ranked #1 in the world from 1924 to 1946.

Alekhine, Grace

Alexander Alekhine's fourth wife. She was born Grace Wishard on October 26, 1876 in New Jersey. Her parents were Emile Bernard Wishard (Jewish) and Marie Ida Smith. She later married Archibald Freeman, a British tea-planter in Ceylon. He died in the early 1930s. She took up chess and played Alexander Alekhine in a simultaneous exhibition in Tokyo in 1933. The two started a relationship shortly thereafter. They were married in March 1934 at Villefranche-sur-Mer, near Nice, France. The marriage certificate says her maiden name was Wishaar. She was 16 years older than Alekhine. It was his 4th marriage and may have been her 4th marriage as well. She owned a chateau in Saint Aubin-le-Cauf, a few miles southwest of Dieppe in Normandy, France. In 1936/37, she participated in a minor tournament at Hastings. Alexander Alekhine won the premier section and she took 3rd place in her section. He won 15 pounds for 1st place and she won 1 pound for 3rd place. During World War II, the Nazis took over their chateau and looted it. She moved to Paris. Alekhine was free to travel, but no exit visa was given to Grace. After World War II, she sold her chateau under American Embassy protection. She was in failing health and in her 70s. She spent her final years in her studio in Paris, but visited St. Ives, Cornwall, where she was a member of the local chess club. She later led the effort to get Alekhine's body transferred to the Cimetiere de Montparnasse in Paris. The USSR and French Chess Federation paid to transfer the remains from Portugal to Paris. She died in March 1956. Her grave spells her maiden name as Wishar. After she died, the notes in Alekhine's handwriting were allegedly found in her effects to prove he wrote the Nazi articles.

Alekhine's Defense

The moves 1.e4 Nf6 were played before Alekhine (analyzed by Allgaier in 1819), but Alekhine popularized it. Alexander Alekhine first played this defense at Budapest in September 1921 against Saemisch and E. Steiner. By May 1922 it was being called the Alekhine's Defense by Sir George Thomas in the British Chess Magazine. Also in May 1922, Hans Fahrni wrote the first monograph on the opening, calling it Die Aljechin-Verteidigung.

Alfil

Arabic for elephant. The English equivalent is Bishop. It was probably one of the original chess pieces, appearing in chaturanga and shatranj. Alfil is still the name of the Bishop in Spanish and some other European languages.

Alfonsi, Petrus

Petrus Alphonsi (1062-1110) was an astronomer and the physician of the English king Henry I (1068-1135) and to King Alfonso VI of Castile. He was also the author of the Disciplina Clericalis (Training School for the Clergy). He included chess as one of the seven knightly accomplishments to be mastered. The other tasks included riding, swimming, archery, boxing, hawking, and verse writing. Alfonsi was born Moses Sephardi in Spain in 1062, but was baptized as Petrus Alfonsi at the age of 44.

Alfonso Manuscript

A 98-page manuscript ordered by Alfonso the Wise (1221-1284), King of Castile. It included chess, backgammon, and games of chance with dice. Compiled in 1283, it is entitled Juegos Diuersos de Axedrez, Dados, y Tablas con sus Explicaciones, Ordenados por man Dado Del Rey don Alonso el Sabio. It is the first source mentioning the pawn's double move on the first move. It also includes 103 chess problems mainly drawn from older Muslim sources. The manuscript was written by the monks of the monastery of St. Lorenzo del Escorial, near Madrid.

Alfonso XIII

King of Spain from 1886 to 1931. He played in Spanish national chess tournaments in the 1920s. Alfonsi suspended the exercise of royal power and went into exile in Rome in 1931. The Second Spanish Republic deposed him. His grandson, Juan Carlos, is now king. He was born in 1886 and died in 1941.

Algebraic notation

Algebraic notation is a form of chess notation by using a combination of letters and numbers (a to h horizontally and 1 to 8 vertically from the White point of view). The first use of algebraic notation is from a French manuscript written in 1173. The first use of the figurine algebraic notation occurred in Belgium in 1927. Algebraic notation was introduced in Chess Life in 1969. It wasn't until 1974 that the first book employing the algebraic notation was published by a major American publisher.

Ali, Essam Ahmed

Essam Ahmed Ali was born on March 31, 1964 in Egypt. He won the Arab Championships in 1996. In 2003, he won the Egyptian championship. He was an Egyptian International Master and Egypt's top player, who died on October 27, 2003, of cerebral malaria after returning from the All Africa Games tournament in Abuja, Nigeria. The 60-year-old head of the Egyptian chess delegation, Mohammed Labib, died of the same disease the next day. Both were incorrectly diagnosed in Egypt after becoming ill. Both were bitten by an infected mosquito.

The first American Chess Congress, organized by Daniel Fiske and held in New York, was won by Paul Morphy in 1857. The top 16 American players were invited (Allison,

First American Chess Congress

Calthrop, Fiske, Fuller, Kennicott, Knott, Lichtenhein, Marache, Mead, Meek, Morphy, Paulsen, Perrin, Raphael, Stanley, and Thompson). First prize was $300. Morphy refused any money, but accepted a silver service consisting of a pitcher, four goblets, and a tray. Morphy’s prize was given to him by Oliver Wendell Holmes. The second American Chess Congress was held in Cleveland in 1871 and won by George Mackenzie (1st place was $100 – or $1,500 in today’s currency). There were nine players (Mackenzie, Hosmer, Elder, Judd, Ware, Smith, Harding, Johnston, and Houghton). The entry fee was $10 ($150 today). The third American Chess Congress was held in Chicago in 1874 and won by Mackenzie. There were eight players (Mackenzie, Hosmer, Judd, Bock, Elder, Perrin, Congdon, and Kennicott) and they had to pay a $20 entry fee. 1st place prize was $225. The fourth American Chess Congress (called the American Centennial Championship) was held in 1876 in Philadelphia and won by James Mason. There were 9 players (Mason, Judd, Davidson, Bird, Elson, Roberts, Ware, Barbour, and Martinez). The entry fee was $20. 1st place was $300. The fifth American Chess Congress was held in 1880 in New York and won by Mackenzie (on tiebreak over Grundy). There were 10 players. The sixth American Chess Congress was held in 1889 in New York, and won by Chigorin and Weiss. The seventh American Chess Congress was held in 1904 in St, Louis, and won by Frank Marshall.

American Chess Federation

Forerunner of the US Chess Federation (USCF). In 1935, the Western Chess Association, founded in 1900, became known as the American Chess Federation (ACF). Arpad Elo was its first President and Kirk Holland was its Vice President. In 1938, George Sturges was elected president of the ACF. The Western Open, under the Western Chess Association, became known as the American Open. Chess Review magazine became the official magazine of the ACF. In 1939 it merged with the National Chess Federation to form the USCF. The American Open became known as the U.S. Open.

American Chess Foundation (ACF)

Formed in 1955, and leading philanthropic organization in U.S. chess. Its original members were Alexander Bisno, Jacques Coe, Walter Fried, Morris Kasper, Rosser Reeves, Lessing Rosenwald, and Cecile Wertheim. It changed its named to Chess-in-the-Schools in 1986.

American Chess Magazine (ACM)

Name of a chess magazine in 1846-1847 (edited by Charles Stanley), 1872-1874, 1875, and 1897-1899. The June 1897 edition was published by William Borsodi and edited by Charles Devide. Contributors included Pillsbury, Albert Hodgesm Shipley, and Showalter. It lasted for 30 issues.

American Revolution

During the American Revolution, there was a strong effort by the colonists to rename the pieces to Governor, General, Colonel, Major, Captain, and Pioneer. A good revolutionary would not play with kings, queens, knights, and bishops. There was a similar effort to rename the chess pieces during the French Revolution.

Amherst College

College located in Amherst, Massachusetts. The college chess team was the winner of the first intercollegiate chess match, in 1859. They defeated Williams College (Williamstown, Massachusetts). The event was actually an intercollegiate baseball and intercollegiate chess match simultaneously as part of a single event. The two teams met on a neutral site in Pittsfield, Massachusetts to engage in a “trial of the mind as well as the muscle.” Amherst won at both sports, and their teams were heralded as “Athletic and Academic Champions.”

Amsterdam 1964

In May-June 1964, the Interzonal tournament was held in Amsterdam with 24 players. It was a four-way tie for first place between Smyslov, Larsen, Spassky, and Tal. First place was $250. A 1959 rule was in effect, prohibiting more than three players from the same country from qualifying. Only three of the five Soviet players were allowed to be seeded into the 1975 Candidates matches. That prevented 5th place finisher Leonid Stein and 6th place finisher David Bronstein from qualifying for the Candidates tournament. This was the 2nd time Stein failed to qualify for the same reason. The 8th place finishers, Reshevsky and Portisch, played a play-off match. This was won by Portisch. Paul Keres was the runner-up in the previous Candidates, and was seeded into the 1965 Candidates matches. Mikhail Botvinnik, the loser of the last world chess championship to Petrosian, was seeded in the Candidates matches but declined to participate. His place was taken by Geller, who had finished 3rd in the previous Candidates tournament. Bobby Fischer, after winning the US Championship with a perfect score, and qualifying to play in the Interzonal, refused to play in the Interzonal. He was boycotting FIDE tournaments because he claimed the Soviets were cheating by drawing with each other. Fischer was undefeated in the last Interzonal at Stockholm. The US representatives were Reshevsky, Evans (14th place) and Benko (16th place). Each received $500 for playing in the event.

He was held hostage from March 16, 1985 to December 4, 1991. He built chess sets out of aluminum foil before they allowed him to have a regular chess set.

Anderssen, Adolf

Winner of the first international chess tournament (London 1851). Between 1851 and 1878 he took part in 12 chess tournaments. He was on the prize list in every one of them. He took 1st prize at London 1851, London 1862, Hanburg 1869, Barmen 1869, Baden 1870, Crefeld 1871, and Leipzig 1876. Strongest player in the world between 1859 (when Morphy retired) and 1866 (when Steinitz defeated him). In 1851 A. Anderssen was recognized as the strongest chess player in the world. That same year A. Anderson (Andrew Anderson) was recognized as the strongest checker player in the world (first world checker champion). In 1877 a group of German chess fans organized a tournament to commemorate the 50th anniversary of Anderssen's learning the chess moves. This is the only tournament in chess history organized to commemorate a competitor. He tied for second, behind Paulsen. He was a professor of mathematics when not playing chess. When he died, his obituary was 19 pages long. He was born in 1818 and died in 1879.

Art

There are at least 100 paintings called “Checkmate.” The first known painting depicting a chess game is kept at the Cappella Palatina in Palermo, Sicily. It is dated before 1200. It shows two Arabs seated on the ground with a chessboard between them. The Chess Players, painted in 1490, was the first known painting with a chess theme. The painting resides in the Metropolitan Museum of New York. Until 1948, the painting was attributed to Francesco di Giorgio (1439-1501). Since that time the painter is thought to have been Girolamo da Cremona or Liberale da Verona.

Atahualpa

Atahualpa (1497-1533) was the 12th and last Inca emperor of Peru (Tawantinsuyu or Incan Empire) who was imprisoned by Francisco Pizarro and the Spanish conquistadors in 1532. He learned chess by watching his guards play, and before long was beating them all. It is said that a certain Spanish captain hated him for this and had him murdered (strangled with a garrote). Atahualpa may have been the first American chess player. This information is preserved in a letter from Don Gaspar de Espinosa (1533) and the autobiography of Don Alonso Enriquez de Guzman (1518-1543).

Atwood, George

George Atwood was born in 1746. He was an English mathematician and lecturer at Cambridge. In 1776, he was elected a fellow of the Royal Society of London. William Pitt, British Prime Minister, was one of Atwood's former students. He gave Atwood a position as a personal secretary and an office in the Treasury. In the 1784, he created the Atwood machine for verifying experimentally the laws of acceleration of motion. In 1787, he joined the London Chess Club. From 1787 to 1800, he recorded his own games and the games of others, including Philidor, played at the London Chess Club. On June 20, 1795, he took part in Philidor's last blindfold performance. Philidor played his last game of chess, against Atwood, on June 29, 1795 at the Parsloe's Club. In 1798, he defeated Joseph Wilson in a match (3-0). In 1799, he, again, defeated Wilson in a match (3-0). When George Atwood died on July 11, 1807, he left his chess notebook to Joseph Wilson. When Wilson died in 1833, George Walker bought Atwood's notebook. In 1835, Walker, based on Atwood's chess notebook, wrote Selection of Games at Chess, actually played by Philidor and his Contemporaries, published in London. The book contained 47 of Philidor's games.

AVRO

Algemeene Vereenigde voor Radio Oemrop (AVRO), a Dutch broadcasting company, which sponsored the world's strongest tournament held up to that time from November 5th to the 27th of November, 1938. The top eight players in the world participated (Keres, Fine, Botvinnik, Alekhine, Reshevsky, Euwe, Capablanca, and Flohr). First place was equivalent to $550 (shared by Fine and Keres). Alekhine, for the first time in his life, came ahead of Capablanca. Capablanca, for the first time in his life, fell below 50%. He lost four games in this event. Flohr, the official challenger who was expected to play a world championship match with Alekhine, came last without a single victory in 14 rounds. Each round was played in a different Dutch city that rotated between Amsterdam, The Hague, Rotterdam, Groningen, Zwolle, Haarlem, Utrecht, Arnhem, Breda, and Leiden.

Baguio

Philippine city that hosted the 1978 World Championship match between Karpov and Korchnoi. No flags were present because Korchnoi had defected from the Soviet Union and was “stateless” and had no flag to represent. The national anthem for both players was supposed to be played. The orchestra did not know the Soviet national anthem and played something else. Since Korchnoi did not represent any country, the orchestra played Beethoven’s Ninth Symphony. On the morning of the match, it was discovered there was not a single “Staunton” design chess set in the city. Someone drove 150 miles to Manila to buy a Staunton chess set for the world chess championship. It arrived 15 minutes before the scheduled first game.

Bain, Mary Weiser

Mary Bain (1904-1972) was the 1937 and 1952 challenger to the World's Women Championship (she was born in Hungary). She won titles in Cuba, Sweden, Finland, and the United States. She was U.S. women's champion from 1951 to 1953. She was a pupil of Frank Marshall and Geza Maroczy. She was a Bridge expert and operated a duplicate-bridge club in New York. She was the first American woman to represent the United States in an organized chess competition. In 1963, she played for the United States in the Women's Olympiad. Belden-Stephens Trophy

Chess trophy donated by W. VanDyke Belden and L. Walter Stephens of Princeton for the winner of the Ivy League Intercollegiate League, first organized in 1925. It included Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Dartmouth, Columbia, Rutgers, and West Point. In 1892, the first organized American intercollegiate league was organized by the CHCP League (Columbia, Harvard, Yale, and Princeton) to encourage men to play chess. Columbia was a member of this group, but was too good, winning 10 straight times. Columbia was then replaced by Dartmouth in 1930. In 1948, the trophy was retired after Harvard won it for the fifth successive year. A new intercollegiate cup was donated by Columbia University.

Bernstein, Ossip

Ossip Bernstein (1882-1962) was a Russian Grandmaster (1950). In 1903, he took 2nd (behind Chigorin) in the third Russian Championship. In 1906, he earned a Doctorate in law at Heidelberg and became a successful financial lawyer. In 1918 Ossip Bernstein was arrested in Odessa by the Cheka and ordered shot by a firing squad just because he was a legal advisor to bankers. As the firing squad lined up, a superior officer asked to see the list of prisoners' names. Discovering the name of Ossip Bernstein, he asked whether he was the famous chess master. Not satisfied with Bernstein's affirmative reply, he made him play a game with him. If Bernstein lost or drew, he would be shot. Bernstein won in short order and was released. He escaped on a British ship and settled in Paris. Bernstein's son was President Eisenhower's official interpreter because he spoke almost every European language. At age 74, he was still playing in international tournaments.

It was the first worthwhile chess book in English and, at the time, only available at Slaughter's Coffee House (founded by John Slaughter in 1692). Bertin had 19 rules to follow during play. One of them was: to free your game, take off some of your adversary's men, if possible for nothing. He was born in 1695 and died in 1736.

Best Chess Game

The first "best chess game prize" was awarded to Isidor Gunsburg for his game against James Mason at the 6th American Chess Congress, held in New York in 1889. The game was played in the first round. For winning this game, Gunsberg was awarded the special prize of $50 donated by Frank Rudd and Fred Wehle for the best game of the tournament. The tournament itself was a 20-man double round robin (38 games for each player), one of the longest chess tournaments in history. Mikhail Chigorin and Max Weiss tied for 1st place. The tournament was intended to select a challenger for the world championship title. The 16th game of the second Karpov-Kasparov World Championship Match in Moscow 1985 was chosen by an international jury of Grandmasters as the best game ever played in the past 30 years.

Bishop

The origin of the name of the chess bishop is obscure. It was introduced in the 15th century, taking the move of the courier and placed where the alfil used to be at the set up of the chess pieces on a chessboard. The appearance of the Muslim fil was formless but with two protuberances said to symbolize the elephant from which the piece derives its name. Perhaps these suggest the Bishop's mitre, hence Bishop, the name used in English-speaking countries since the new game gained acceptance. The original move of the bishop was only three squares diagonally. By 1500 it could move to any open square diagonally.

Biyiasas, Peter

Canadian Grandmaster (1978) who later moved to the United States. He has won the Canadian championship twice (1972, 1975). In 1978 he won the World Open. In 1981 Bobby Fischer stayed at Biyiasas's home. They played hundreds of blitz and bullet chess games. Biyiasas got one draw and lost all the rest. He is married to International Master Ruth Haring. He was born in 1950.

Bjelica, Dimitrije

Yugoslav chess journalist and master that may have played the greatest number of games at one time. In 1982 he played 301 games at once, winning 258, drawing 36, and losing 7 in nine hours. He is a former champion of Bosnia and Herzegovina. He has interviewed and filmed every world champion since Botvinnik. He has written over 80 chess books with 190 editions and produced 35 chess videos. He is the founder of the World Children's Chess Olympiad. He was born in 1935.

Blackburne, Joseph Henry

Joseph Henry Blackburne (1841-1924) was an English player of grandmaster strength. He learned the game at age 19. He won the British championship in 1868. His nickname was the Black Death, given to him by a comment in the tournament book of Vienna 1873. He was also known for his temper. After losing to Steinitz in a match, he threw him out of a window. Luckily for Steinitz that they were on the first floor. From 1870 to 1888 he was one of the top 5 chess players in the world. He was once arrested as a spy because he sent chess moves in the mail and it was thought the moves were coded secrets. He tied for first in the British Championship of 1914 at the age of 72.

During a simultaneous exhibition at Cambridge University, the students thought to gain the advantage by placing a bottle of whisky and a glass at each end of the playing oval. In the end he emptied both bottles and won all his games in record time. During the temperance movement in England, he declared that whisky drinking improved one's chess because alcohol cleared the brain and he tried to prove that theory as often as possible. It is estimated he played 100,000 games of chess in his career.

Blackmar, Armand

Music professor, music publisher, and amateur chess player. He established a music house in New Orleans during the Civil War. He wrote Southern patriotic music such as the Dixie War Song (1861), the Beauregard Manassas quick-step (1861), Southern Marseillaise (1861), and the Bonnie Blue Flag (1862). The bonnie blue flag was the first Confederate flag. He became the major wartime publisher of songs, issuing about half of the songs brought out during the Civil War. However, the city was captured in 1862 and occupied by Union forces. His brother moved to Augusta, Georgia to carry on music publishing for the Confederacy. Blackmar was arrested and imprisoned for publishing Confederacy music such as Bonnie Blue Flag.. The Union soldiers burnt his publishing company to the ground and confiscated all his Confederate States' copyrights. In 1881-1882 he analyzed and published the Blackmar Gambit (1.d4 d5 2.e4 dxe4 3.f3) in the July 1882 issue of Brentano's Chess. He was born in 1826 and died in 1888.

Blake, Joseph

Blimp

Perhaps the first master chess game played on a blimp occurred on the opening day of the 1932 Pasadena International Chess Congress (won by Alekhine).

On the opening day in August, Isaac Kashdan and Arnold Dake played an exhibition game over Pasadena in a Goodyear blimp called “Volunteer.” The blimp had been used during the Olympic games in Los Angeles. The moves were transmitted by radio to the opening luncheon meeting. The game was declared drawn by repetition after 19 moves.

Blind Chess players

In 1950 Sir. T. Thomas was the first blind player to play in a chess Olympiad (Dubrovnik, Yugoslavia). Blind player R. Bonham formed the International Braille Association. The first World Blind Correspondence Championship began in 1955 and was won by R. Bonham. James Slagle won the first U.S. Championship for the blind in 1971. The American master Albert Sandrin (1923-) of Chicago participated in the World Chess Championship for the Blind and played all his games from memory, without use of a board. In 1968 the United States had only 25 blind chess players in its Braille Chess Association. The Soviet Union had 150,000 blind players in its Braille Chess Association.

Blindfold Checkers

Blindfold checkers is more difficult than blindfold chess. The greatest number played blindfold simultaneously is 28. The uniformity of checkers makes it harder to reach distinctive positions.

Blindfold Chess

Buzecca, a Muslim, was the first blindfold player in Europe, playing two games blindfold in Florence in 1265. It took 518 years before three games were played blindfold, by Philidor in 1783. One newspaper wrote “This exertion of Mr. Philidor’s abilities appear one of the greatest of which the human memory is susceptible. That record stood for 74 years. In 1857 Louis Paulsen played four games blindfold simultaneously (see simultaneous). In 1930, blindfold chess was once forbidden by law in the Soviet Union because it is considered artistically pointless and harmful to one’s health.

Blocker, Calvin

International Master (1982). 12-time Ohio Champion. He was born in 1955.

Bloodgood, Claude

Claude Bloodgood III (1937-2001) was an active chess player, chess organizer and rating statistician for the Virginia State Chess Federation in the 1960s. He was sentenced to die in Virginia after he murdered his mother in 1969. The sentence was commuted to life in prison. While in prison, he played chess almost every day. He played thousands of correspondence games (free postage for those on Death Row) and thousands of games with his fellow inmates. At one point, he had 1,200 postal games going at the same time. In 1973, he played in the Virginia State Championship wearing manacles. In 1974, he received a furlough to play in a chess tournament outside the prison. He escaped by overpowering his corrections officer, but was captured a few days later. That ended furloughs for chess players. In 1996, his USCF chess rating rose to 2702, making him the second highest rated player in the country. He was also the 3rd most active chess player in the nation, with over 1,700 games to his credit. His rating was due to the closed pool ratings inflation, as he won almost every rated game he played against other prisoners, many rated as masters due to their provisional rating.

In the 8th World Correspondence Championship, 1975-1980, he placed 11th-12th. He did not play in the 9th World Correspondence Championship, but took 7th place in the 10th World Correspondence Championship, 1978-1984. He was born in 1934.

Bogart, Humphrey

Before becoming a movie star, Humphrey Bogart (1900-1957) hustled strangers at 5-minute chess for 50 cents a game in chess parlors in New York Times Square during the 1920s and 1930s. During the 1930s depression, Bogart, Reshevsky, and Denker were in adjacent department store windows playing passerbys for dimes. In 1943 the FBI prevented him from playing postal chess, thinking the chess notation were secret codes. He was a USCF tournament director and active in the California State Chess Association. He once drew a game against Reshevsky in a simultaneous exhibition. He made 75 films and chess appears in several of his movies. He and his wife, Lauren Bacall, appeared on the cover of Chess Review in 1945 playing chess with Charles Boyer. Bogart rated his friends according to their ability to play chess.

Bogdanovic, Rajko

International Master (1963) from Bosnia. He played in 10 Yugoslav championships. His occupation was journalist and radio reporter. He was born in 1931.

Bogdanovski, Vlatko

Grandmaster from Macedonia. His FIDE rating is 2443. He was born in 1964.

Bogoljubow, Efim

Efim Bogoljubow (1889-1952) was a Grandmaster (1951), born in Kiev, who once spent over two hours over his 24th move against Steiner, Berlin 1928, and then chose a move that lost a piece. In 1928 he defeated Max Euwe in a match in the Netherlands (won 3, lost 2, drew 5). The match was for the title of FIDE champion, so Bogoljubow was the first FIDE world champion. This was stated in the minutes of the FIDE's 5th chess congress at The Hague in 1928. He played Alexander Alekhine in 1929 and 1934 for the World Chess Championship and lost both matches by a wide margin. His most famous statement was "When I'm White I win because I'm White. When I'm Black I win because I'm Bogoljubow." He died in Triberg, Germany after concluding a simultaneous chess exhibition. He was USSR Champion in 1924 and 1925. He left the USSR in 1925 and settled in Germany. He renounced his USSR citizenship in 1926 and became a German citizen in 1927. He was then denounced as a political renegade in the Soviet Union. He won the German championship in 1925, 1931, 1933, and 1949.

Bogatirchuk, Feodor

Feodor Bogatirchuk (1892-1984) was a Russian International Master (1954) from Kiev who emigrated from the USSR to Canada in 1949 and was the first persona non grata in Soviet chess. In 1912, he tied for 2nd in the championship of Czarist Russia. He was the author of the first chess book in Ukrainian in 1926. He won the USSR championship in 1927 (tied with Pyotr Romanovsky). He played in 6 Russian championships. He was a medical doctor and professor of radiological anatomy. During World War II he was head of the Ukrainian Red Cross. He was nominated by Canada for the Grandmaster title, but the Soviet representatives to FIDE protested this title, which he never received but deserved.

Boi Paolo

Paolo Boi (1528-1598) was one of the leading players of the 16th century. In 1549 he defeated Pope Paul III (1468-1549) in a chess match. The Pope offered to make him cardinal which he refused. Pope Pius V (1504-1572) also offered to make him a cardinal. In 1574 Boi defeated Ruy Lopez de Segura (1530-1580) at the court of King Philip II (1527-1598) of Spain. The King showered him with great rewards including an official appointment in Sicily that paid 500 crowns (scudi) a year. Boi served King Philip as a military officer. In 1576 he was taken prisoner and sold as a slave to a Turk. He played chess for his master that brought in a lot of money. He later gained his freedom back. Several sources say that he was poisoned by his servant for the sake of his money in Naples in 1598. Other sources say he caught a cold when hunting and died as a result of it.

Bolbochan, Jacobo

Bonus Socius (Good Companion)

A manuscript written around 1275 by Nicholas de St. Nicholai of Lombardy, Italy. It contains a collection of chess problems. It is the first large collection of older chess problems. It was the first European manuscript that used coordinate notation.

Book, chess

The oldest European book on chess is “Juegos Axedrez, dados y tablas,” written in the 13th century. The first hardback book dealing with chess, Dass Goldin Spil, was published in Augsburg in 1472. The first chess book printed in Russia was a translation of Benjamin Franklin’s Morals of Chess, published in St. Petersburg in 1791. The title was Pravila dlia Shashechnoi Igry (Rules for the Game of Chess). However, the title used the word for checkers instead of the word for chess (shakmatnoi). The first book to explain chess strategy was L’Analyze des Eschecs, by Philidor in 1749. It went through more than 100 editions in ten languages. The first chess book published in America was Chess Made Easy by James Humphreys, printed in Philadelphia in 1802. This was just a reprint of Philidor’s book published in 1796. The first original American book was The Elements of Chess, published in Boston in 1805. The first chess book entirely devoted to the analysis of a single opening, Analysis of the Muzio Gambit by Kassin and Cochrane, was published in India in 1829. A book was published in German with the title, Advice to Spectators at Chess Tournaments. All the pages were blank except the last. On the last page were two words, Halt’s Maul, keep your mouth shut. Perhaps the best selling chess book is CHESS MADE EASY by Cecil Purdy and Peter Koshnitsky. First published in 1942, by its 26th edition in 2010, it had sold over 500,000 copies.

Botvinnik, Mikhail

Former world champion Mikhail Botvinnik (1911-1995) was the only man to win the title three times. He played every world champion of the 20th century and the early trainer of Karpov and Kasparov. He never played a “friendly” or leisure game of chess in his life. He lost only one game on time in his life. Against Smyslov in 1958, he forgot about his clock and lost the game on time in a won endgame. He had 3 minutes to make two moves, but failed to make his moves on time. In 1976, every Soviet grandmaster was asked by the Soviet government to sign a letter condemning Viktor Korchnoi as a “traitor” after Korchnoi defected. Only Botvinnik and Spassky openly refused to sign the letter. Botvinnik played more world chess champions than any other player. He played Lasker, Capablanca, Alekhine, Euwe, Smyslov, Tal, Petrosian, Spassky, and Fischer. He also gave lessons to Karpov and Kasparov.

Bourdonnais – McDonnell Match

Between June and October 1834, Louis-Charles Mahe de La Bourdonnais (1795-1840) of France and Alexander McDonnell (1798-1835) of Ireland played 85 games (6 matches), the largest number of games ever played successively in match conditions. Neither knew a word of the other's language, and the only word they exchanges was “check.” La Bourdonnais spent his time spitting, cursing, singing, and laughing. McDonnell spent up to two hours to make a single move. Some of the games lasted over 7 hours to complete. La Bourdonnais won 45 games, lost 27, and drew 13.

Bourdonnais, Louis-Charles Mahe de La

Louis-Charles Mahe de La Bourdonnais (1795-1840) was a French master and strongest chess player of his time. He learned chess in Paris in 1814 while attending school. He was undisputed champion of France in the 1820s. In 1834 he played a series of matches with England's strongest player, Alexander McDonnell, and won. In 1836 he became editor of the world's first chess magazine, Le Palamede. He died in London and was buried in Kensal Green cemetery and was buried near McDonnell.

British Chess Association

The British Chess Association (BCA) was the first national body to promote chess. It was founded in 1884 by Wordsworth Donisthorpe (1847-1914). Winston Churchill’s father, Lord Randolph Churchill (1849-1895), was elected Vice President of the BCA in 1885. Another active member was John Ruskin (1819-1900), art critic an social critic. The President was the poet Lord Alfred Tennyson (1809-1892). This organization soon failed after several years and reorganized as the British Chess Federation (BCF) in 1904. An earlier organization of the British Chess Association had its first championship in November, 1866. This was considered the first British Chess Championship. It was won by Cecil Valentine De Vere. In 1857, there was a British Chess Association Congress in Manchester, won by Johann Loewenthal. The 1862 BCA membership included 30 of British strongest players. In 2004, the BCF was replaced by the English Chess Federation (ECF).

British Chess Federation

The British Chess Federation (BCF) was founded on May 7, 1904. It was the governing body of chess in England from 1904 until 2005. In 2006, it was renamed the English Chess Federation. The first BCF champion was William Ewart Napier.

British Chess Magazine

First chess magazine to complete 100 years of continuous publication (1881 to 1981). It began as a monthly chess magazine in October, 1872 called Huddersfield College Magazine. On January 1, 1881 it became the British Chess Magazine.

Bronstein, David

David Bronstein was the original name of Leon Trotsky (1879-1940), Russian revolutionary. He was the commissar for war who created the Red Army and came to power with Lenin. He spent much of his time during World War I playing chess in Vienna’s Cafe Central. His main opponent was Baron Rothchild. He and Lenin played chess together a great deal.

Brother-Sister

The first brother-sister to tie for first place in a tournament was Harold and Bernadette Reddik in Chicago in 1982.

Bronstein, David

David Bronstein (1924-2006) was a Grandmaster (1950) and winner of the first Interzonal in 1948 at Saltsjobaden who survived an assassination attack during the tournament. On the last day Bronstein was playing Tartakover.

Suddenly, a Lithuanian made a lunge at Bronstein to kill him. Several spectators grabbed him. He wanted to murder all Russians because he claimed the Russians were responsible for sending his sister to Siberia and murdering her. Bronstein won the game and the Interzonal with a 13.5-5.5 score. First place prize for the first interzonal was $550. He wrote a classic book covering the 1953 Candidates Tournament in Zurich. Many consider this the greatest chess book ever written. Bronstein married Grandmaster Isaac Boleslavsky’s daughter. In 1951 he tied the world championship match 12-12 with Botvinnik. A tie match meant that the world champion would retain his title. Thus, Bronstein became the man who came the closest to the world championship without winning it. He played in 20 USSR championships.

Browne, Walter Shawn

Six-time U.S. chess champion (1974, 1975, 1977, 1980, 1981, and 1983). He became a Grandmaster in 1970 while representing Australia (he was born in Australia and raised in New York). He is the founder of the World Blitz Chess Association (WBCA). He was inducted in the US Hall of Fame in 2003. In 1966 he won the US Junior Championship. He has won the National Open 11 times and the American Open 8 times (from 1971 to 1997). He won the first World Open, held in New York, in 1973. In 1964 he won the New York State Junior Championship with a perfect 5-0 score. In 1966 he won the first U.S. Junior Championship. In 1969 he won the Australian championship. In a Canadian tournament in 1971, one of Browne’s opponents tried to fluster him in a time-pressure scramble by banging an extra Queen down on the side of the board. The opponent’s pawn was about to make it to the 8th rank and get promoted to a Queen. Browne picked up the extra Queen and hurled it across the tournament room. Browne learned the game at age 8. He made master at age 14. He dropped out of high school (Erasmus High) to play chess and poker. His wife, Racquel, is a clinical psychologist from Argentina. In 2005, he won the US Senior Open in Las Vegas. He was born in 1949.

Cable match

In 1895, the first transatlantic cable match (moves transmitted by telegraph) was played between the British Chess Club and the Manhattan Chess Club. In 1897 a cable match between the British House of Commons and the U.S. House of Representatives resulted in a draw. In 1899 a cable match between American universities and British universities took place. It was won by a single game by the British universities. Between 1896 and 1911, England and the USA played 13 cable matches. Each team had 6 wins each, and 1 tie. The total points were 64 to 64. The first cable match between the United States and the Soviet Union occurred in 1935 when the New Bedford Chess Club of Massachusetts played a cable match against the Central Chess Club of Leningrad.

Cabot, Godfrey Lowell

Godfrey Cabot (1861-1962) was born in Boston, Massachusetts on February 12, 1861. He went to M.I.T. and graduated from Harvard with a degree in chemistry. He became a leading industrialist and philanthropist. For many years he was President of the Boston Chess Club and of the Massachusetts State Federation. He played chess until he was 85, when he gave it up because he found it was too exciting. He received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree from Harvard at the age of 90. He died on November 2, 1962.

Cabrito, Goran

Grandmaster from Serbia and Montenegro (Yugoslavia). His FIDE rating is 2469. He took 40th-47th at the 1990 Manila Interzonal. He was born in 1958.

Cafe de la Regence (Coffee House)

Perhaps the most famous of coffee house where chess was played. This coffee house was opened up in Paris by an American in 1670. Chess players from Café Procope moved to the Café de la Regence. Around 1740 chess players gathered there to play chess. Players like Philidor, Morphy, Steinitz, Lasker, Capablanca, Alekhine, Legall, Deschappelles, Bourdonnais, Saint Amant, Franklin, Napoleon, Voltaire, Rousseau, Robespierre, Calvi and other played there until 1916, when the chess room was closed. Paul Morphy did not like the Café de la Regeance, calling it an ill frequented establishment.

Cafferty, Bernard

Bernard Cafferty (1934-) was British Boys' Champion in 1952 and British Junior Champion in 1954. He was British Correspondence Champion in 1960 and 5-time British Lightning Champion from 1964 to 1969. He took part in every British championship from 1957 to 1970. Caissa

Caissa (pronounced ky-EE-sah or ky-suh), is a mythical Thracian dryad portrayed as the goddess of chess and invented by the Italian bishop and poet, Hieronymus Vida (1485-1566) in 1527. His 658-line Latin poem, Scacchia Ludus (The Game of Chess) first mention Caissa.

An earlier version of his poem, written in 1525, used the name Scacchia instead of Caissa. In 1763, Sir William Jones (1746-1794) re-used Vida's character in his own poem called Caissa. In this poem, the god Mars falls in love with Caissa and presents the game of chess to Caissa in an attempt to win her affection.

Calvi, Ignazio

Ignzaio Calvi (1797-1872) was an Italian chess master and chess problem composer who stayed in France for 4 years as a political refugee. He was a leading player and teacher at the Cafe de la Regance. In 1845 he drew a match with Kieseritzky (7 wins, 7 losses, 1 draw) in one of the first chess matches ever held. He contributed a chess course to Le Palamede magazine. He returned to Italy in 1848 and joined the Army. He retired in 1862 as a major.

Calvo Minguez, Ricardo

Ricardo Calvo (1943-2002) was a Spanish journalist, chess historian, medical doctor and International Master (1973) who was censured by FIDE for writing articles that were critical of the world chess federation. He played for Spain in 5 chess Olympiads. He died of cancer of the esophagus.

Canute

Canute (995-1035) was the King of Denmark, England, and Norway in the 11th century. He may have learned the game of chess during a pilgrimage to Rome. A Danish saga mentions that in 1026, the king had a Danish earl murdered in a church when Earl Ulf (Wolf) overturned a chessboard after the King made a bad move and tried to take it back.

Capablanca y Graupera, Jose Raoul

Cuban-born (1888), Capablanca was American-educated and sent to a private school (Woodycliff School of South Orange) in New Jersey when he was 16 in 1904. He joined the Manhattan Chess Club at that time and impressed many of the players. In 1906 he went to Columbia University in New York to study chemical engineering, he spent most of his time at the Manhattan Chess Club. Two years later he dropped out of Columbia University and dedicated most of his time to chess. In 1908-09 he toured the U.S. and lost only one game in hundreds of games played during simultaneous exhibitions, winning all the others. He won the New York state chess championship in 1910. In 1913 Capablanca obtained a post in the Cuban Foreign Office with the title of Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary General from the Government of Cuba to the World at Large. After his divorce from his first wife, her family had him demoted to the post of Commercial Attaché. He once had the mayor of Havana clear a tournament room so that no one would see him resign a game (against Marshall in 1913. Capablanca lost only 36 games out of 567 in his whole life. He did not lose a single game from 1916 to 1924. Capablanca never had a chess set at home. On March 7, 1942, he was seated at a chess board at the Manhattan Chess Club, watching a skittles game, when he suddenly toppled backwards from his chair. He had suffered a massive stroke (cerebral hemorrhage) and died later that night in a New York hospital. At the time of his death, he was the commercial attaché of the Cuban Embassy in New York. General Batista, President of Cuba, took personal charge of the funeral arrangements. Capablanca may be the youngest player of a published game. In 1893, at the age of 4 years and 10 months, Capablanca (receiving queen odds) defeated a chess player in Havana. This game was recorded and published.

Carr, Neil

Neil Carr (1968-) is the youngest player to beat a grandmaster in a clock simultaneous exhibition. In 1978 at the age of 10 he beat a grandmaster. He won the World under-14 championship.

Carroll, Charles

Charles Carroll (1737-1832) was the last survivor of the 56 signers of the Declaration of Independence (he represented Maryland), and the only Roman Catholic signer. At age 89 he played the Turk automaton at Baltimore in 1827 and won. An “adjustment” to the machine and the Turk’s queen, which otherwise could have checkmated the next move, helped Carroll to win. Carrol died at the age of 95.

Carroll, Lewis

Lewis Carroll (1832-1898) was the author of Alice’s Adventures in Wonderland (1865) and Through the Looking-Glass (1872), the story of Alice and her journey as a pawn across the chessboard, eventually to become a Queen. The 32 pieces are identified as ‘Dramatis Personae’ at the start of the book. Each of them has some part in the story. Lewis Carroll referred the chess pieces as red and white, the usual colors of an ivory chess set. The illustrations were by John Tenniel, who based his illustrations on the St. George’s pattern, not the Staunton pattern. Carroll’s diaries mention chess on several occasions. His diaries indicate that he beat Lord Tennyson’s sons at chess and that he played chess on the train during his journey to Russia. His real name was Charles Lutwidge Dodgson. He was a mathematician and lectured at Oxford.

Cassel, Hartwig

Hartwig Cassel (1850-1929) was born in Konitz, West Prussia and later moved to Scotland, where he was a member of the Glasgow Chess Club. From 1882 to 1889, he was the chess editor of the Bradford Observer Budget in England. He was a journalist for the New York Staats Zeitung, New York Tribune, Sun, The Times, The World, and the Associated Press. He was the editor, along with Hermann Helms, of the American Chess Bulletin, which was first published in 1904.

Caze, M.

M. Caze (1650-1710) was the author of the first manuscript on the King’s Gambit, in 1706. It was his opinion that accepting the King’s Gambit would lead to a forced draw. He was the first to propose a type of random chess, by moving the king and queen around in the back rank. He also wanted to take away the advantage of the first move by playing the pawn only one square up. He was the first to record chess games played by other players, then reprint them. He recorded the games of the best chess players in Paris in the 1680s.

Cebalo, Miso

Miso Cebalo (1945-) is a Yugoslav (now Croatia) Grandmaster (1985). He tied for 1st place in the 1985 Yugoslav championship, but lost the play-off to Marjanovic. He tied for 6th-7th in the 1985 Taxco Interzonal. He is currently rated 2511.

Cessolis, Jacobus de

JacobusdeCessolis(1275-1322)wasaDominican monk who wrote De Moribus Hominum ed de Officiis Nobilium Super Ludo Scaccorum (On the Customs of Men and Their Noble Actions with Reference to the Game of Chess). This is the best known of all chess moralities, written around 1300. The moralities deal with all sorts and conditions of men, allegorically represented in their various ranks by chess pieces. In 1474 William Caxton translated the French version into English and printed it under the title The Game of Chess. It was the second book printed in the English language (Caxton translated and published a history of Troy a few months earlier).

Castling

As late as 1561 castling was two moves. You had to play R-KB1 on one move and K-KN1 on the next move. The longest delayed castling in a grandmaster game is believed to be in the game Bobotsov-Ivkov, 1966 when White castled on the 46th move. Black had castled on his 5th move. Two other non-grandmaster games show castling on the 48th move.

Caxton, William

William Caxton (1420-1492) was the publisher of the second book to be printed in English, The Game and Playe of the Chesse, on March 31, 1474 in Flanders. It was reprinted in 1483 with woodcuts added. Caxton’s chess book was the first printed book in English to make extensive use of woodcuts for pictures. The book is a translation of Liber de moribus hominum et officiis nobelium ac popularium super ludo scachorum (The Book of the Morals of Men and the Duties of Nobles and Commoners on the Game of Chess) by Jacobus de Cessolis (1250-1322). Caxton translated the book from a French version that was published in 1473. Caxton’s first book printed in English was the Recuyell of the Historyes of Troye, published a few months before his chess book.

Chadwick, Henry

Henry Chadwick (1824-1908) was born in England, he later came to the USA as a journalist and sportswriter. He became one of the foremost authorities on baseball. In 1860 he edited The Beadle Baseball Player, the first baseball guide on public sale. He is considered the father of baseball. He was enshrined in baseball's Hall of Fame in 1938, the only writer elected to the Hall itself. He was an avid chess player and was a member of every chess club in Brooklyn. He wrote a chess column in his own newspaper, the American Chronicle. He wrote Chess for Novices.

Chajes, Oscar

Oscar Chajes was born in Brody, Russia on December 14, 1873. In 1909 he was the winner of the US Open in Excelsior, Minnesota. He became secretary of the Isaac L. Rice Progressive Chess Club. In 1911, he took last place at Carlsbad. In 1916 he defeated Capablanca in New York (round 2) in 66 moves at the Rice Memorial tournament. Chajes took 3rd place, after Capablanca and Janowski. Capablanca would not lose another game until the 1924 New York tournament, where he lost to Reti. In 1917 he won the New York State championship in Rochester. He died on February 28, 1928.

Chandler, Murray

Murray Chandler (1960-) is a Grandmaster (1983). He won the 1975-76 New Zealand championship, then settled in England. In 1981, he edited Tournament Chess. In 1984 he was joint Commonwealth Champion. In 1986, he was joint British Champion. From 1991 to 1999 he was editor of the British Chess Magazine. In 1975, at the age of 15, he wrote A White Pawn in Europe, about his games at the World Junior Championship in Yugoslavia and English tournaments.

Pascal Charbonneau (1983-) is a Grandmaster (2006) from Canada. He is a two-time Canadian champion (2002 and 2004). He was Quebec champion at the age of 16 and Canadian Champion at the age of 18. In 2005, he was mugged at gunpoint at the World Open in Philadelphia.

Charlemagne Chessmen

The Charlemagne Chessmen are a collection of 16 chess pieces alleged to have been given to the Saint Denis Abbey by Charlemagne (742-814). Modern experts consider the pieces date back to the 12th century. The pieces are now displayed at the Cabinet des Medailles, Bibliotheque Nationale in Paris. Legend has it that the chess pieces were offered to Charlemagne by Harun al-Rashid (763-809), caliph of Baghdad, on the coronation of Charlemagne in 800. In 1598, 30 chess pieces had been inventoried. 16 pieces were left after the French Revolution. The pieces are carved from elephant ivory.

Charles, Ray

Ray Charles (1930-2004) was a blind musician

(born Ray Charles Robinson) who learned chess in 1965 after being busted twice and hospitalized for heroin addiction. He learned chess in the hospital where he went cold turkey after 17 years of drug use. He used a peg set made for the blind. He appeared on the cover of Chess Life in September 2002 and was interviewed by Larry Evans. Ray Charles stated that chess was his favorite game. One of his chess opponents was Willie Nelson, who mentioned Ray Charles' chess skills at his funeral. He also played chess with Dizzy Gillespie. In the film, Ray, there is a scene of Ray Charles playing chess in the hospital with the doctor while recovering from his addiction. He died of liver disease.

Chaucer, Geoffrey

Geoffrey Chaucer (1343-1400), in his poem The Book of the Duchesse, written in 1369, described the invention of chess to Attulus (269-197 BC), the King of Pergamon. A poet asks a knight (the man in black, the Black Knight) the nature of his grief. The knight replies that he played a game of chess with a lady and lost his queen and was checkmated. Chaucer may have had only a slight knowledge of chess.

Chaude de Silans, Chantal

Chantel Chaude de Silans (1919-2004) was a French chess player and countess. In 1934, at the age of 15, she won the ladies championship of France. In 1949-50, she was a Women's World Championship Challenger. In 1950, she was awarded the Women's International Master title.

She was the first female to play in a men’s Olympiad. She played on the men’s French team in 1950 at Dubrovnik. She won 1 game, drew 1 game, and lost 4 games. She managed the Caissa chess club in Paris for many years.

Chauvenet, Louis Russell “Russ”

Louis Chauvenet (1920-2003) was U.S. Amateur Champion in 1959. In 1991, he won the fourth National Deaf Championship. He won the National Tournament of the Deaf in 1980, 1983, and 1987. In 1992, he was awarded the Grandmaster title in Silent Chess.

Check

Up until the early 20th century, it was mandatory to announce a check. Up until the late 19th century, it was mandatory to say ‘check to the queen’ or ‘garde’ when she was attacked. At one time, if the king and another piece were simultaneously attacked by a piece, it was customary to announce the fact by saying check to both pieces. Up until the early 19th century, an unannounced check could be ignored. Before 1495, the rook was the most powerful piece. At that time the term check-rook was used for a move that checked the king and attacked the rook at the same time. In early Sanskrit chess, the king could be captured, ending the game. The Persians introduced the idea of warning that the king was under attack to avoid an early and accidental end of the game. Later, the Persians introduced the rule that the king could not move into check or be left in check.

Checkers

In 1851 the world checker champion was A. Anderson. In 1851, the world chess champion was A. Anderssen. Newell Banks was the only American master of checkers and chess. He could play 10 games of chess, 10 games of checkers, and a game of billiards simultaneously. Blindfold checkers is more difficult than blindfold chess. The greatest number played blindfold simultaneously is 22, by world checkers champion Ton Sijbrands of the Netherlands (winning 17, with 5 draws). The uniformity of checkers makes it harder to reach distinctive positions. In 1900, Harry Nelson Pillsbury once played 15 chess and 15 checkers games blindfold simultaneously. In 1933, Newell Banks played 20 checkers games blindfolded simultaneously in 2 hours and 25 minutes in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania.

Checkmate

The longest checkmate with 6 men (including kings) is 243 moves. With 7 men, the longest mate is 517 moves. In 1929,

Otto Blathy created a chess problem that took 290 moves to checkmate. There are 8 different ways to mate in two moves and 355 different ways to mate in three moves. In 1997, the longest checkmate announced in blindfold simultaneous chess occurred when Hindenburg Melao, Jr. announced checkmate in 12 moves at Sao Paulo, Brazil in one of his games of a 9-board blindfold simul. The previous record occurred in 1877 when Joseph Henry Blackburne announced checkmate in 8 moves in one of his games of a 10-board blindfold simul.

Chess Board

The first chess board of alternating light and dark squares appeared in Europe in 1090. Up until the late 19th century, the chess boards in Africa were of a single color, simply divided into squares.

Chess Club

In 1839, the first chess club in Budapest (Pest) was formed. Its members included Jozsef Szen and Loewenthal. Chess clubs were not allowed following the Hungarian Revolution of 1848-1849. It wasn't until 1864 that the Budapest Chess Club was re-established. The Hamburger Schachklub (HSK) in Hamburg, Germany, is the oldest chess club in Germany, founded in 1830.

Chess column

The first newspaper chess column was that in the Liverpool Mercury, which first appeared on July 9, 1813 and ended in August 1814. The chess diagrams were printed without shaded squares. In November 1823, the weekly medical journal Lancet started adding a few chess problems (but no diagrams) to its magazine. One of the oldest chess columns was that of the Illustrated London News, which first appeared on June 25, 1842 and edited by Howard Staunton. The news magazine was published weekly until 1971. Publication ended in 2003. The first American chess column appeared in 1845 in the New York Spirit of the Times.

Chess players

43% of Russians have played chess at least once in a year. 23% of Germans have played chess at least once in a year. 15% of Americans have played chess at least once in a year.

Chevalier, Frederick

Frederick Chevalier (1907-?) was a chess master. In 1927, he won the Boston Chess Championship. He was a former Harvard College Champion. He wrote a chess column in The Christian Science Monitor.

Chiburdanidze, Maya

Maya Chiburdanidze (1961-) is a Six-time World's women champion for 13 years, from 1978 until her defeat by Xie Jun of China in 1991. Her coach had been Eduard Gufeld. She was USSR women's champion at 15, won the women's Interzonal at 16, defeated three of the best women in the world (Alexandria, Akhmilovskaya, and Kusnir) in matches at 17, and world champion (defeating Gaprindashvili) at age 17, the youngest of any world champion in chess. She was awarded the title of International Woman Master in 1974 at the age of 13, making her the youngest title holder in the history of chess up to that time. She didn't even have a FIDE rating.

Chicago World's Fair 1933

The National Chess Federation organized a chess program for the 1933 Chicago World's Fair. World champion Alexander Alekhine made a special trip from Paris and played a blindfold simultaneous exhibition on a record-setting 32 boards. He won 19, drew 9, and lost 4 games in 12 hours. This broke the previous record of 30 simultaneous blindfold games set by George Koltanowski in Antwerp, Belgium in 1931. Alekhine also played a living game of chess with Edward Lasker, in which the chess pieces were people in medieval costumes on a large outdoor chess board. A masters chess tournament was planned, but was cancelled due to lack of funds. A scheduled Intercollegiate Tournament was held and won by Lieutenant John Matheson, who recently graduated from West Point Military Academy.

Chigorin, Mikhail

Mikhail Chigorin (1850-1908) was founder of the Russian school of chess. He was the first public chess worker, organizer, and journalist in Russia. His first chess magazine, Chess Sheet, only had 250 subscribers in all of Russia. From 1878 to 1907 he was considered the best Russian chess player. In 1889 he unsuccessfully challenged Steinitz for the world championship in Havana, which ended after 17 games and only one draw (the last game). Steinitz had won 10 and lost 6. A month later Chigorin won America's first international tournament, New York 1889. He took second place in the Hastings 1895 tournament (behind Pillsbury) and won the first three All-Russia tournaments (1899, 1900-01, 1903). At Hastings 1895 he won a ring and a copy of Salvoli's The Theory and Practice of Chess for winning the most Evans Gambits. In 1958 the USSR issued a chess stamp with a portrait of Chigorin. He learned chess at age 16 (some sources say he learned chess in his early 20s).

He was a Georgian career diplomat who served as former Ambassador to Kenya and the Netherlands. He was assigned to the Soviet consulate in San Francisco and embassies in London and New Delhi.

China

The Chinese Emperor Wen-Ti (541-604) of the Sui dynasty executed two foreign pre-chess players after learning that one of the pieces was called "Emperor." He was upset that his title of Emperor could be associated with a mere game and forbade the game. Chinese chess is played on a board 9 squares by 8 and the pieces move on the intersections of the lines rather than the squares, so that the actual playing area is 10 by 9. One of the pieces as a cannon, unknown anywhere else. Chess was not listed as a competitive sport in China until 1956. The Chess Association of China was formed in 1962. It didn't have its first championship tournament until 1974. China joined FIDE, the world chess federation, in 1975. The first international tournament ever held in China was in 1980. The Chinese Chess Association was founded in 1986.

John (Jack) Collins (1912-2001) was a chess teacher to Bobby Fischer, Robert Byrne, William Lombardy, Donald Byrne, Sal Matera,

Ray Weinstein, Lisa Lane, and Rachel Crotto. He has won the U.S. Correspondence Chess Championship (1943), the Marshall Chess Club Championship (1953), and the New York Championship (1952). He was the first postal chess editor of Chess

Review. He reached the finals of the first ICCF World Chess Championship in 1953. His first house was on Hawthorne Street in Brooklyn, so he named his chess club that met at his house, the Hawthorne Chess Club. He kept that name when he moved to 91 Lenox Road.

Columbus, Christopher

When Christopher Columbus came to Spain with his final request to the queen for a fleet of ships, King Ferdinand was playing a game of chess with Fonesca, one of the experts of his day in chess. Ferdinand was about to lift a piece preparatory to moving, and the move would have been fatal and the loss of the game. “Nay sire,” said the astute Queen Isabella, who was a fine chess champion herself, “stay your hand. You cannot win the game except as you pursue the course which I urge upon you toward our friend Columbus in his project to the unveiling of a new world.” Isabella could not tell her husband which moves she should make in the game. But her mind being full of Columbus’ project she diverted her language so that it might apply to the game also, and thus she gave Ferdinand directions as to move after move until he compelled checkmate of Fonesca’s king. Ferdinand was so delighted that he gave Columbus the aid desired.

Commons, Kim

Kim Commons (1951- ?) was the 1971 California State Chess Champion. He won the American Open in 1974 and 1975. In 1976 he became an International Master. He taught chess to Mel Brooks and to all the band members in Jefferson Airplane. He became a real estate agent.

Cook

Cook is a composition term for an alternative key not intended by the composer. Emanuel Lasker said that the term was named after Eugene Beauharnais Cook (1830-1915) of Hoboken, New Jersey in the 19th century who was so expert a solver, and found 2nd or more solutions to so many problems, that his name came to signify the act. He was the foremost American chess problemist of his day. His father was a general. He graduated from Princeton first in his class. He had one of the largest collections of chess books and magazines in the United States. He composed 655 chess problems during his lifetime. The term “cook” may have originated from Joseph Kling (1811-1876), a famous study composer.

Cook Eugene Beauharnais

Eugene Cook (1830-1915) was the foremost American problemist of his day. He had many of his chess problems published in Staunton’s The Chess Player’s Chronicle, and The Illustrated London News. Cook served as President of the New Jersey Chess Association and assumed the post for problem department in The Chess Monthly. At the time, Paul Morphy was the editor of the games section. In 1859 he wrote American Chess-Nuts, a major work of chess problems in America. He personally composed around 800 problems.

Cook, Nathaniel

Nathaniel Cook was the designer (along with John Jaques) of the Staunton chessmen in 1835. He registered his design in 1849. Howard Staunton recommended the use of these chessmen six months later and it was offered to the public by the company of John Jaques of London. Cook did not renew his registration, valid for only three years. In 1852 Staunton made a deal with Cook to authorize Staunton’s signature as a trademark to attach to the boxes in which his sets were sold. Cook was Staunton’s editor at the Illustrated London Times. Cook’s firm was absorbed by John Jaques and Son, Ltd in 1900.

Cooke, H. I.

In the 1870s, the Chess Players' Quarterly Chronicle was the first chess magazine to organize postal chess tournaments.

In December 1875, the first international correspondence match began between the USA and Canada. It lasted until 1877. The USA won 26 to 11.

In 1875, the first correspondence match in Italy took place between the chess clubs of Ferrara and Livorno.

In 1876, the first correspondence all-play-all tournament was organized by Rev. T. Archdall. There were 17 entries. The winner was John Crum.

In July 1877, the first intercontinental correspondence chess match, the International Postal Card Match, began between the USA and the UK. The match lasted until 1881. There was no official result after 112 games. The USA team had 32 wins and the UK team had 30 wins.

In 1883-84, the Cambridge University Chess Club played a postal game with patients at the Bethlehem (Bedlam) Hospital and lost.

In 1884, the French chess magazine La Strategie organized an international chess tournament, open to subscribers in Europe and Algeria. There were 11 players from France, Belgium, England, Greece, and Hungary. The winner was Laquiere, a Frenchman living in Algeria.

On May 31, 1897, the House of Commons played the House of Representatives in a cable match.

In 1900, the first ladies' correspondence chess tournament was organized by Hobbies weekly magazine. There were 7 ladies that played. Mrs. F. Sterling Berry and Mrs. Bowles tied for first.

In 1906, the British Correspondence Chess Association was formed. Its original name was The Capital and Counties Correspondence Chess Association. It was the first successful British correspondence organization, and it still exists.

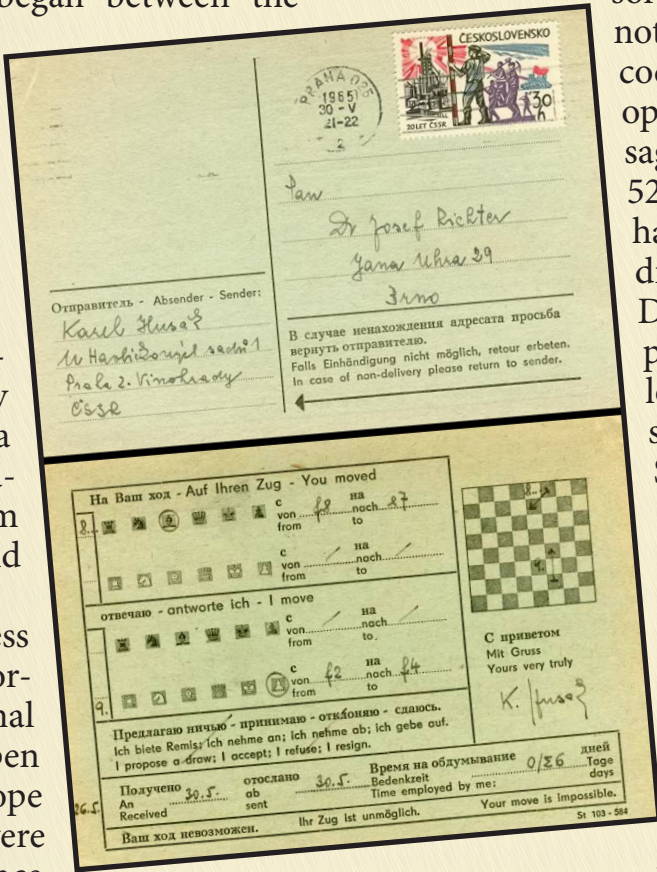

In 1915, chess was being played between French and German soldiers in their trenches. The moves were announced by megaphone.

In 1935 the US played England a 1,002 board correspondence match. It was stopped in 1941 when the British Government's Board of Censors thought that the chess notation was some kind of code which offered too many opportunities for secret messages. At the time, there were 526 games finished. The US had won 223, lost 203, and drew 100 games.

During World War II, no postal chess play was allowed between civilians and servicemen in the United States and Canada. Soldiers overseas were not allowed to play postal chess due to censorship restrictions.

Dr. Reinhart Straszacker and Dr. Hendrick van Huyssteen, both of South Africa, played their first game of correspondence chess in 1946. They played for over 53 years, until Straszacker died in 1999. The played 112 games, with both men winning 56 games each.

In 1939, H. Jarvis of England was playing a correspondence game with Eberhardt Wilhelm of Germany. When World War II started, it was Mr. Jarvis's move. After the war, it took two years before normal postal services were resumed between England and Germany. Wilhelm wrote that he was still waiting for the next move. Mr. Jarvis replied with a move. So one move took eight years to play.

The first world correspondence championship was delayed by the outbreak of World War II. In 1947, the preliminaries for the world corr. Championship started. There were 78 participants from 22 countries. The tournament ended on March 31, 1953. The winner was Cecil John Seddon Purdy of Australia.

There have been 26 world correspondence champions.

In 1968, Hans Berliner became the first American grandmaster in correspondence chess. It took 15 years before the USA had another GM in correspondence chess. In 1983, Victor Palciauskas became a GM in correspondence chess. The USA now has 11 GMs of correspondence chess.

Correspondence Chess League of America

The Correspondence Chess League of America (CCLA) is the oldest postal chess organization in America and second oldest in the world. It was founded in 1909. It publishes the largest correspondence chess magazine in the world, THE CHESS CORRESPONDENT, the oldest national magazine in the US. In 1909, the Correspondence Chess League of Greater New York (CCLGNY) was founded by a group of correspondence players who had been conducting postal chess tournaments since 1897. By 1917, CCLGNY and three other groups merged to create the CCLA. In 1940, the CCLA had the first numerical ratings of chess players.

Dadian

(Salome Dadian de Mingrelie)

Salome Dadian de Mingrelie (1848-1913), Prince of Mingrelia and sponsor of the 1903 Monte Carlo tournament. He invited Tchigorin to play but later paid him 1,500 francs (greater than 3rd prize money) not to play because Tchigorin had published analysis of one of the Prince's games, pointing out he had made gross errors. A valuable art object was to go to the winner of a short match between the 1st and 2nd place finishers (Tarrasch and Maroczy). The players wanted a play for money also. This annoyed the Prince who gave the art object to the 3rd place finisher (Pillsbury).

Dake, Arthur W.

Arthur Dake (1910-2000) became a bridge toll collector, then a highway auto controller, and finally an automobile inspector for the state of Oregon. He left high school in Portland, Oregon at age 16 and took a job on a freighter, working his way to Hawaii, Japan, and China. He learned chess at 17 at some seaside café when he saw a chess set, and induced the owner to teach him the game. At age 20, he played in his first chess tournament, the New York State Championship, and took 3rd place. A few months later, he won the Marshall Chess Club Championship. At 22, he beat world champion Alexander Alekhine at the 1932 Pasadena Tournament. He and Humphrey Bogart used to make a living hustling chess at Coney Island. In three chess Olympiads, he won 27 games and only lost four games, winning a gold medal and the best result of any individual player at Warsaw 1935. He was given the International Master title in 1954. He received the honorary Grandmaster title in 1986 in recognition of his results in the 1930s. He was the oldest competitive chess grandmaster in history.

was still playing chess in his late 80s and early 90s. At 90, in 1973, he won a New Hampshire Open tournament with a perfect 5-0 score. In 1975, he was designated Master Emeritus by the USCF. He died on July 8, 1979 in Framington, Massachusetts at the age of 95. He played chess for 75 years (1900 to 1974). He won the championships of Massachusetts, New Hampshire (1962), Vermont, and Maine (9 times). He competed in 280 tournaments and matches, not counting correspondence events.

Damiani, Petrus (Peter)

Peter Damiani (1007-1072), was the cardinal bishop of Ostia, Italy who wrote to Pope Alexander II in 1061 urging the pope to forbid chess from the clergy and to punish a bishop in Florence for wasting his time playing chess in the evenings. Damiani associated the game with frivolity and the sin of gambling.

Damiano, Pedro

Pedro Damiano (1480-1544) was a Portuguese apothecary (pharmacist) from Odemira who came from a Jewish background. He may have left Portugal for Italy in 1497 when King Manuel the First persecuted the Jewish community in Portugal. He was the author of Questo Libro e da imparare giocare a scachi et de li partiti, the first chess (modern chess) book in Italy. It was published in Rome and written in Italian and Spanish in 1512. It was the first bestseller of the modern game of chess. It went through eight editions in 50 years, first being published in Rome. The book has ten chapters and 124 pages, 89 of which deal with 72 problems and studies. The book contained chess advice and introduced the smothered mate. In the book, Damiano suggested that chess was invented by Xerxes, and called the game of chess Axedrez, which is the Spanish word for chess today. 1.e4 e5 2.Nf3 f6 is called Damiano's Defense. There were no new chess works from Damiano's book until Ruy Lopez wrote his book in 1561, almost 50 years later. The discovery of Damiano's chess book and its mistakes encouraged Ruy Lopez to write his own chess book. Pedro Damiano may have been a pseudonym to hide his real name. In 1560, Gruget translated Damian's book into French. In 1562, J. Rowbowen translated Damiano's book into English.

Dear Abby

In 1991, a lady wrote the following to advice columnist Abigail Van Buren. “Dear Abby: I am a 26-year-old female who would like to meet a decent, eligible man. I’ve tried the bar scene, but most men are after a one-night stand. I’ve tried church groups, but the few men who are present came because their wives made them go. So where do I go from here?” Abby (Abigail Van Buren) responded, “I have a suggestion. Join a chess club. Women are always welcome. Furthermore, they will find that men outnumber women 10-to-1. Not bad odds! Also, from 25 percent to 40 percent of the men will be unmarried. Men who play chess on a regular basis are usually of good character. The game requires that the player make individual, intelligent, patient and logical decisions. These attributes carry over into everyday life. For example, I estimate that 95% of steady tournament players do not smoke, and I have never met one who abuses alcohol or drugs. They are almost always employed, are high achievers and have a stable family life. A woman could counter with, “But I don’t know anything about chess.” Well, that could be to her advantage. What better way to break the ice than to ask a man of her choice to show her the moves?”

de Groot, Adrian

Adrian de Groot (1914-2006) was a Dutch psychologist and chess master who did the first psychological enquiry into the minds of chess players. His 1965 book, Thought and Choice in Chess, showed the different abilities of masters and amateurs. He found that masters can recall 93% of all the pieces on a board of a chess position from a game (not random) after looking at it for 4 seconds. Experts remembered 72% and weaker chess players were able to recall only 51% of the pieces. When random positions were shown, all levels of players recalled the same percentage of pieces. This suggested that masters were able to use some form of chunking, or pattern-matching, that allowed them to recall the positions. He played on the Dutch Olympiad team in 1936, 1937, and 1939.

de Riviere, Jules

De Rivière - Morphy, Paris - 1858

Jules de Riviere (1830-1905) was the leading French master of his day. He was a frequent opponent of Morphy and they were good friends. Morphy pawned his watch that was given to him by the Brooklyn Chess Club to de Riviere, who loaned Morphy a large sum of money. Morphy never paid de Riviere back. Morphy and de Riviere set out to write a book on chess openings, but they never completed or published the book.

De Shahiludo

The first British reference to chess is the 36-line Latin poem De Shahiludo, written by a Winchester monk. It was written in the last decade of the 12th century. The poem uses the words calvus for bishop, regina for queen, rex for king, equestris for knight, rochus for rook, and pedestris for pawn.

de Vere, Cecil

Cecil Valentine Brown, later known as Cecil de Vere, was born in February 14 (Valentine's Day), 1845. In 1857, at the age of 12, he was taught who to play chess by a strong London player, Francis Burden (1830-1882). In 1859, he joined the City of London Chess Club. In 1860, at the age of 15, he was a regular at Simpson's Divan. In 1864, he played a number of games against Reverend George A. MacDonnell, winning the majority of them. In 1865, he won a match against Steinitz (+7-3=2), with Steinitz playing odds of a pawn and a move. In November, 1866, at the age of 21, he won the 1st British Chess Association Challenge Cup, held in London, becoming the first official British Chess Champion. He remained the youngest titleholder for over a century (until Nigel Short). In June 1867, he took 5th at Paris France, won by Kolisch. In September 1867, he took 3rd-4th at the 3rd Congress of the British Chess Association at Dundee, Scotland, won by Gustav Neumann.

While he was in Dundee, he learned that he had tuberculosis (consumption). He worked at Lloyds Bank, but gave up his employment when he discovered he had tuberculosis. In 1868-69, he tied for 1st place at the 2nd British Chess Association Challenge Cup, held in London. He lost the play-off to Joseph Blackburne. In 1870, he took 6th-7th at Baden-Baden, Germany. In 1872, he took 3rd-5th at the 2nd British Chess Federation Congress in London. In 1872, he was the chess editor of the Field, but lost it after 18 months through inattention to work (he had become an alcoholic). In 1874, he lost a match against Zukertort in London. He died of tuberculosis and a penniless alcoholic at the age of 29 on February 9, 1875 at Torquay.

Duchamp, Marcel

In 1961, artist Marcel Duchamp (1887-1968) organized an art exhibition with works by Picasso, Dali, Matisse, Ernst, Alexander Calder, Miro, Tanguy, himself, and others. The works were auctioned off and the profits were used for the Duchamp Chess Endowment Fund of the American Chess Foundation. He visited the set of “Paris Blues” to teach Duke Ellington to play chess. Ellington watched Duchamp demonstrate the fundamental moves, then made his sole comment, “Crazy, man, crazy.” Duchamp was an active member of the Board of Directors of the American Chess Foundation. In 1966, he organized a chess exhibition called Hommage a Caissa. He asked for and received works from Bellmer, Ernst, Lichtenstein, Magritte, Oldenberg, and others to be auctioned for chess funds. He produced thirty ‘ReadyMade’ chess sets and sold them at the Cordier & Elkstrom Gallery in New York. In this exhibition, he played chess with Salvador Dali while Andy Warhol had the band Velvet Underground sent to provide the background music. Duchamp raised over $32,000 to support the American Chess Foundation. Duchamp achieved the title of national chess master of France in 1925. In 1935, the International Correspondence Chess Federation held a 4-year correspondence tournament. It was won by Duchamp without a loss of any game. He was the first International Correspondence Chess Olympiad Champion. Duchamp designed a pocket chess set, but he could not market it.

Edinburgh-London Correspondence Match
The first well known correspondence challenge was the Edinburgh – London chess club match, from April 24, 1824 to July 31, 1828. The match was scheduled to continue until two decisive games were completed. Draws did not count (there were 2 draws – games 1 and 3). Edinburgh made the first move on 4 of the 5 games. Edinburgh won, 2-1.

Einsiedeln Verses
The Einsiedeln Verses are the earliest known literary account of chess and the earliest reference to chess in a western document. It was written in the 10th century in the Benedictine monastery at Einsiedeln, Switzerland. It is a 98-line Medieval Latin poem, called versus de scachis, describing chess. It is dated around 997 A.D. The text only describes how the pieces move. It is not allegorical in nature.

Einstein, Albur

Albert Einstein, contrary to published statements, did not play “three-dimensional” chess for recreation. He didn’t even play chess in two dimensions. He seemed to think he had a better use for his mind. He never played bridge either. Bridge is work, he said, not relaxation. What did he do for recreation? He took long walks and played the piano or violin.

En Passant
En passant was first used in the 15th century but not universally accepted until 1880.

Euwe, Max
Machgielis (Max) Euwe (1901-1981) (pronounce uhr-vuh) was twice world champion – 1935-37 and for 1 day in 1947. In 1947, the FIDE Congress voted for Euwe to be world champion since Alexander Alekhine died. However, the Soviet delegation, which joined FIDE in 1947, was late one day for this vote. They showed up the next day and had the title rescinded in favor of a match-tournament (later won by Mikhail Botvinnik). Euwe was an amateur boxer and once won the amateur heavyweight boxing champion of Europe. His PhD dissertation was entitled “Differential variants of two co-variant vector fields with four variables.”

Fahrni, Hans
Hans Fahrni (1874-1939), a Swiss master, was the first master to play 100 opponents simultaneously. It took place in 1911 at Munich. He was the Swiss chess champion in 1902. In 1916, suffering from psychosis, he was hospitalized. He was released, but following a relapse, he was hospitalized again and diagnosed with “catatonic schizophrenia.” In 1922, he was the first to write a chess monograph on the opening 1.e4 Nf6, which he called Alekhine’s Defense (Die Aljechin-Verteidigung).

Ferdowsi

Ferdowsi (940-1020) was one of Persia’s greatest poets. In 1011 he finished the great epic poem “Shahnameh” (Book of Kings) which recounted the history of chess. This massive poem took 35 years to write. It is the only pre-Islamic source which gives such details as the names of the chess pieces. It is considered the national epic of the Iran (Persia) and the Persian speaking world. It has 50,000 verses.

Ferrand
In 1213 Ferrand, the Count of Flanders, got angry and hit his wife, Jeanne, after losing to her in chess. Later, he was taken prisoner by Philip Augustus at the Battle of Bovines. His wife could have obtained his release but never forgave him for the beating. He remained a prisoner for 13 years (1213-1226).

Film and Chess
The first time chess appeared in film was from a scene in The Wishing Ring in 1914. The heroine, Sally, attempts to display her intelligence and love of the intellect by playing a game of chess. She also plays chess with the Earl to distract him from the pain he suffers from gout. The first film to deal exclusively with chess was Chess Fever, made in Moscow in 1925 and starring Capablanca.

Fine, Reuben
Reuben Fine was one of the best chessplayers in the U.S. in the 1930s. During World War II he was employed by the Navy to calculate where enemy submarines might surface based on positional probability (operations research). He was also a translator for the military as he was fluent in 7 languages. He gave up chess to become a psychoanalyst.

Fischer-Spassky, 1972
Bobby Fischer played Boris Spassky in a back room of the 1972 world chess championship in game 3. A chess set had to be found that both players would agree to play on in this back room. The chess set was only used once, and was later auctioned for $76,275.

Fleming, Ian

Moonraker, the third James Bond novel by Ian Fleming (1908-1964), written in 1954, contains references to Paul Morphy. “Morphy, the great chess player, had a terrible habit. He would never raise his eyes from the game until he knew his opponent could not escape defeat. Then he would slowly lift his great head and gaze curiously at the man across the board. His opponent would feel the gaze and would slowly, humbly raise his eyes to meet Morphy’s. At that moment he would know that it was no good continuing the game. The eyes of Morphy said so. There was nothing left but surrender. Now, like Morphy, Bond lifted his head and looked straight into Drax’s eyes. Then he slowly drew out the queen of diamonds and placed it on the table. Without waiting for Meyer to play he followed it, deliberately, with the 8, 7, 6, 5, 4, and the two winning clubs.” It was a battle over a game of bridge. Moonracker was Britain’s first nuclear missile project. In 1957, Fleming wrote From Russia, With Love with several references to chess. World champion Alexander Alekhine won the individual gold medal with 9.5 points out of 12 (79.2%).

Folkestone 1933

Site of the 5th Chess Olympiad (called the Tournament of Nations) in Folkestone, England. It comprised of an open, an unofficial women’s tournament, and the 4th Women’s World Chess Championship (won by Vera Menchik, with a perfect 14-0 score). First place team, and the Hamilton-Russell Cup, went to the USA (Kashdan, Marshall, Fine, Dake, and Simonson), followed by Czechoslovakia and Sweden (tiebreak over Poland and Hungary). 15 teams and 71 players participated. It was the smallest of all Chess Olympiads.

Grossdeutscher Schachbund (GSB)

Nazi chess organization formed in 1933, with headquarters in Berlin. It was a purely politically motivated organization. Its president was Ehrhardt Post (1881-1947). Dr. Joseph Goebbels (1897-1945), the German Minister of Propaganda, was the honorary President. All Jews were excluded and the Constitution said that only German Aryans could be members. At one time, it had 50,000 members. Its chess magazine did not include any games by Jewish players. In 1943, the GSB headquarters in Berlin was completely destroyed in an Allied bombing raid. All files and records of the GSB were destroyed.

Grundy, James

The Grundy Affair is the most infamous scandal in U.S. championship history. James Grundy (1855-1919) needed a win in the last round to tie for first place at the 5th American Chess Congress in 1880. Grundy bribed his opponent, Preston Ware (1821-1890), $20 during the game to let Ware’s advantage slip into a draw so that Grundy could make sure of second place. When Ware agreed and took the money, Grundy tricked him and played for a win which he did. The event was won by George Mackenzie, who beat Grundy on tie-break, 2-0.

Gunsberg, Isidor

In 1916, Isidor Gunsberg (1854-1930), a Hungarian who later became a British citizen, sued the Evening News for libel when they said that his chess column contained “blunders.” He won the suit after the British High Court accepted a submission that in chess matters, eight oversights did not make a blunder. In his earlier years, he operated the automaton Mephisto.

Gutmayer, Franz

Franz Gutmayer (1857-1937) was an Austrian chess writer. In 1898, he wrote a book (The Road to the Championship) on how to become a chess master, but he never became one himself. He never won first place in a Hauptturnier, which was a requisite for the title of master in Germany.

Hazeltine, Miron James

Miron James Hazeltine (1824-1907) was a newspaper chess columnist in the late 19th century. He was the first person to omit the “to” from recorded moves – making “P to K4” into “P-K4.” He was the chess editor of the New York Clipper for more than 50 years. He began his first chess column in the New York Saturday Courier on February 3, 1855. This may be the first chess column in the United States.

Heidelberg

In September 1467, Heidelberg, Germany was the site of the first known European chess tournament. It was sponsored by Frederick

I, Elector of the Palatinate. A second tournament was followed 10 years later in Nuremberg.

Heidenfeld, Wolfgang

In 1958 the reigning Irish Champion won his game at the Munich Olympiad, yet Ireland lost the match 0-4! That’s because the Irish Champion, Wolfgang Heidenfeld (1911-1981), played for South Africa, where they defeated Ireland 4-0. Heidenfeld was born in Berlin, but was forced to move from Germany to South Africa because he was a Jew. He won the South African Chess Championship 8 times. He won the Irish Championship 6 times. During World War II, he helped decode German messages for the Allies.

Heinrichsen, Arved

Arved Heinrichsen (1879-1900) was a Lithuanian chess master. His very short chess career took place in Germany in 1896-1898. He was a mediocl student in Berlin. His name is attached to the Heinrichsen Opening (also known as the Dunst, Baltic, Sleipner, Kotrc, and Queen’s Knight Opening), 1. Nc3. He died of tuberculosis at the age of 20.

Helpmate

Max Lange (1832-1899) invented the helpmate in 1854. A helpmate is a type of chess problem in which both sides cooperate in order to achieve the goal of checkmating Black. Max Lange published the first helpmate in Deutsche Schachzeitung in December, 1854. The problem had White to move first. In November 1860, Sam Loyd (1841-1911) published the first helpmate with Black to move first, which is now the standard.

Henry I

Henry I (1068-1135) was the King of England who, in 1106, imprisoned his brother Richard, Duke of Normandy, in Cardiff Castle for 28 years. Richard’s only activity was playing chess.

HIARCS

The chess program HIARCS (Higher Intelligence Auto-Response Chess System) was first written in 1980 by British teenager Mark Uniacke. The first version was written in BASIC, and could search one move ahead and took 30 seconds to make each move. By 1991, the program could search 800 moves a second on a 386 processor before playing its best move. In 1993, it won the World Microcomputer Chess Championship. In 1995, the program could search 20,000 positions a second. In the mid-1990s, world champion Garry Kasparov began to use HIARCS in his training. HIARCS is now in its 14th version. It can now search over a million positions per second.

Ho Meng-Wei

Youngest chess player to participate in the Chess Olympiad. In 2008, he played for Taiwan at the age of 7 years, 11 months and 12 days. He lost all of his 7 games.

Hodges, Albert Beauregard

Albert Beauregard Hodges (1861-1944), was born in Nashville, Tennessee during the Civil War. He later moved to of Staten Island, New York. He learned chess at age 19. In the 1880s, he was the Tennessee chess champion. His first job was a hidden operator of Ajeeb, the Chess Automation, at the Eden Musee in New York. He won the New York State chess championship in 1892, 1893, and 1894. He won the Manhattan Chess Club championship in 1893 and 1898-99. He was a former U.S. Champion (1894-96) after defeating Jackson Showalter with 5 wins, 3 losses, and 1 draw. He never defended his title due to business pressures (he was an accountant). Pillsbury challenged him in 1895 but Hodges declined for business reasons and announced his retirement from the title in 1896. He was the only American master to play against 5 world chess champions over a period of 60 years. He played Zukertort, Steinitz, Lasker, Capablanca, and Alekhine. He was the only player to participate in all 13 cable matches between the USA and England from 1896 to 1911, all without losing a game. He founded the Staten Island Chess Club and was its president for 12 years. From 1893 to 1913, he was secretary of the Sailors Snug Harbor. He died of a heart attack.

Hong Kong

The Hong Kong Chess Federation was founded in 1960 and joined FIDE in 1961. The Hong Kong team in the 1974 Students' Chess Olympiad, held in Teesside, England, consisted of four brothers aged 8 to 18. They were Suresh, Krishan, Naresh, and Ramesh Jhunjhnuwaia.

Hou Yifan

Hou Yifan (born Feb 27, 1994) was world women's champion at age 16, the youngest ever world champion. She was world champion from 2010 to 2012 and is the current women's world champion. In 2006, at the age of 12, she participated in the FIDE Women's World Championship, the youngest ever.

Houn of Bordeaux

The Huon of Bordeaux is a romance written around 1200 describing a servant who plays chess against a princess, the daughter of Emperor Yvorin. If he loses the game, he loses his head. If he wins, he may sleep with the princess. The princess happens to be a master chess player. In the end, she finally lets him win, but he rejects the reward.

Howe, Henry A

Henry Aspinwall Howell (1815-1900) was a professor and Doctor of Law who won the 6th Canadian chess championship, held in Quebec, in 1877. He participated in 5 Canadian championships from 1874 to 1883. In 1884, he was the President of the Montreal Chess Club. He was a Vice-President of the Canadian Chess Association in 1873-1874.

Ilyin-Genevsky, Alexander

Alexander Ilyin-Genevsky (1894-1941) was a Russian master who had to learn the game twice. He was gassed, then shell-shocked in World War I, which took away his memory (Irving Chernev wrote that a bullet had penetrated a portion of his brain). He had previously been champion of Geneva where he added the city's name to his own. He had to learn the game all over again, starting from how each piece moved. He organized the first USSR chess championship in 1920. He won the first Trade Unions Championship of the USSR in 1927. He supposedly died during the siege of Leningrad in 1941 after a Nazi air raid on his ship. Other sources say that he died during Stalin's Great Purge.

Ilyumzhinov, Kirsan

Kirsan Ilyumzhinov, president of the World Chess Federation (FIDE) since 1995, was the first official Russian billionaire in hard U.S.

dollars. His parents were suspected Nazi collaborators. In 1976, he won the championship of Kalmyka at the age of 14. He was the President of the Autonomous Republic of Kalmykia from 1993 to 2010. He was once arrested and sent to prison by the Russian authorities, accused of being a spy for the Afghan rebels. It was later proven that he merely played chess with the son of the former President of Afghanistan. His major in college was Japanese and he became a sales manager of a Soviet-Japanese automobile company. In 1990, he was the youngest elected member of the Russian Parliament. He speaks 7 languages. He claims he has had personal contact with aliens and rode in their spaceship. (the picture is of Ilyumzhinov playing chess with Khadafi).

India

In India, chessplayers in the 10th century wagered their fingers in a game of chess. The loser had to cut off his finger with a dagger and plunge his hand in a boiling ointment that cauterized the wound.

Ingo System

The Ingo system was the first rating system. It was introduced by Anton Hoesslinger (1875-1959) in 1948 and named after his birthplace of Inglostadt, Bavaria. The Ingo rating system was used by the West German Chess Federation from 1948 until 1992. For the Ingo rating system, lower numbers indicated better performance.

Innocent Morality

The Innocent Morality (Quaedam moralitas de scaccario) was an allegory written in the 13th century which appeared in a manuscript collection of sermons of Pope Innocent III (1161-1216). It is the earliest known printed reference to chess. The morality compares chess with life, the pieces representing different positions of men in society. It was not written by Pope Innocent, but most likely by John of Wales (John Waleys) (1210-1285).

Iran

From 1979 to 1988, Ayatollah Khomeini banned the game of chess in Iran because "it hurts memory and may cause brain damage." He also said chess contributed to a war-mongering mentality. Prior to that Iran, under the Shah, was the only Arab country at the 22nd Olympiad in Israel.

Italy

Italian chess players dominated the game of chess from the 1500s to the 1700s. Correspondence chess may have originated in Italy when Venetian and Croatian merchants played chess by dispatches around 1650. In 1836, correspondence games were published for the first time in Italy by Giuseppe Gasbarri of Florence. The first postal game played in Italy on record was held in 1875-76 between the chess clubs of Ferrara and Livorno. The first chess game by telephone in Italy was played in 1880 in Livorno. The first telegraphic chess match in Italy was held in 1897 between the Milan Chess Club and the Chess Club of Palermo. The first Italian chess correspondence tournament began in 1895 and ended in 1899. The winner was Francesco Abbadess from Palermo. In 1898, the first Italian chess federation, the Unione Scacchistica Italiana, was formed. It was disbanded in 1914. In 1974, Sergio Mariotti became Italy's first grandmaster. The 1980 Italian championship was delayed until 1981 because of an earthquake. In 1982 the Italian Chess Federation refused to allow one of its best players, Stefano Tatai, to play on the Italian Olympiad team. Tatai was 44 and seven time national champion. The Italian Chess Federation only wanted members that were age 30 or younger to represent Italy. The result was a very poor showing at the Olympiad.

Ivan the Terrible

Ivan the Terrible (1530-1584) was a keen chessplayer who died from a stroke while playing chess with Bogdan Belsky (pictured). Ivan reportedly arranged living chess games in which the human players were executed as they were captured in the chess game.

Ivanov, Alexander

In 1995, Alexander Ivanov (1956-) was playing in the U.S. chess championship in Modesto, California when he lost his first round on time. After the first round, he wife, Woman International Master (WIM) Esther Epstein (1954-), arrived to play in the Women’s championship. She told her husband, “I don’t care how you lose, just don’t lose on time!” It worked. He won 6 games, lost one (not on time) and tied for 1st place in the U.S. chess championship. Esther finished 3rd place in the women’s championship (she won it in 1991 and 1997). She also refrained from telling her husband that a fire had damaged their apartment in Massachusetts until after the tournament was over.

Jaffe, Charles

Charles Jaffe (1879-1941) was a Belarusian-American chess master. He woked as a silk-mill merchant until he became a professional chess player in 1910. He was nicknamed “the Crown Prince of East Side Chess” by poet and chess enthusiast Alfred Kreymborg. Capablanca did not like Jaffe after an incident in Havana in which Capablanca charged that Jaffe had intentionally lost a game to Frank Marshall, allowing Marshall to win the tournament ahead of Capablanca. Capablanca arranged with chess organizers to bar Jaffe from any tournament that Capablanca played in. Jaffe was involved in a 1916 Bronx Municipal Court battle involving the non-inclusion for publication of some of his chess analysis.

Jaffe sued Hartwig Cassel for $700 for work allegedly done in analyzing the Rice Gambit for a book, but went unpublished. Jaffe lost the case. This may have been the first American case where chess made to the legal court system. During his career, he defeated Capablanca, Lasker, Mieses, Marshall, Burn, Spielmann, Levenfish, Janowski, Showalter, Carlos Torre, Fine, and other strong masters.

Janowski, Dawid

Dawid Janowski (1868-1927) was a chess master and addicted gambler. In 1901 he won an international tournament at Monte Carlo and lost all his first place money in the casino the same evening the tournament ended. In another event he handed his money to a friend and made him promise not to return it until after the chess tournament. However, the lure of gambling proved too strong and he begged for the return of his money. His friend refused. Janowski was so infuriated that he sued his friend. Janowski had a chess patron, the Dutch painter Leo Nardus, who supported him in chess for many years. One day Nardus suggested an alternate move during a post-mortem of one of Janowski’s games. Janowski called Nardus an idiot in front of a crowd of people. Nardus never gave Janowski any financial support after that. He died penniless and a subscription was raised to prevent his being buried in a pauper’s grave.

Jarecki, John

John Jarecki (1969-)was the first person to win the National Elementary and National Junior High Chess Championship in the same

Keres, Paul

Paul Keres (1916-1975) was the Estonian Sportsman of the Year in 1962. He never became world champion but defeated nine world champions in his career. When asked why he never became world champion, he replied: “I was unlucky, like my country.” From 1954 to 1960, he won 4 straight board gold medals in the chess Olympiads, playing board 3 for the USSR. Paul Keres was stricken with a heart attack at Helsinki, Finland, where his plane touched down returning from his Canadian visit and before he could cross by boat to Estonia. His wife was notified by phone, but the shock hospitalized her, too, with a heart attack. Keres was under intensive care for several days before succumbing on June 5, 1975. His body lay in state in the city’s concert hall and tens of thousands filed past. His obituary ran three pages in a local paper. There were over 100,000 people at his funeral in Tallinn, Estonia.

Kholmov, Ratmir

Russian Grandmaster Ratmir Kholmov (1925-2006) was once suspended for a year from tournament play because of conduct unbefitting a chess master (he was drunk). He was a sailor in the Soviet merchant marine during World War II. He won the Lithuanian championship 10 times.

Khosrau

Khosrau I (501-579) was king of Persia and was supposedly introduced to chess by diplomats from India. Chess was introduced in Egypt by the Sasanian king, Khosrau II (570-628) in 620. He was a Persian king who lived in Egypt for 5 years.

Milan Matulovic (1935-) is a Serbian grandmaster. In 1967 at the Sousse Interzonal, he played a losing move against Istvan Bilek (1932-2010) of Hungary, but then took it back after saying "j'adoube" ("I adjust"). Bilek complained to the arbiter, but the move was allowed to stand as there were no witnesses. After that, his nickname was "J'adoubovic."

McCormick, Edgar Thomas

Edgar Thomas McCormick (1914-1991) participated in more U.S. Open chess tournaments than any other person (37 times). He was a former US Amateur Chess Champion. During World War II, he served in the US Army as a special agent in cryptology and worked for the CIA. He served as Vice President of the USCF.

Mecking, Henrique

Brazilian grandmaster Henrique Mecking (1952-), during his 1973 candidates' match with Tigran Petrosian, accused the formal world champion of kicking the table, shaking the chessboard, stirring the coffee too loudly, and rolling a coin on the table. He went to the referee twice to complain that Petrosian was breathing too loudly. Mecking kicked back at the table and made noises of his own. Petrosian responded by turning his hearing aid off. In 1977, he was the 3rd highest rated chess player in the world, behind Karpov and Korchnoi. He was the first Brazilian GM. He won the Brazilian championship at the age of 13.

Mental breakdowns
Chess players who had mental breakdowns include Tony Miles, Johannes von Minckwitz, Paul Morphy, Akiba Rubinstein, William Steinitz, Carlos Torre, and Raymond Weinstein.

Miles, Anthony

Tony Miles (1955-2001) was the first English-born player to become a grandmaster for over-the-board play, in 1976. He once defeated the World Othello Champion at his own game. Miles had a mental breakdown in 1987 and moved to the United States. He then moved to Australia, then back to England. He played in the British championship (winning one time), the US championship (took last place), and the Australian championship.

Minckwitz, Johannes von

Johanes Minckwitz (1843-1901) was a German chess master who wrote several chess columns, magazines, and three chess books. He edited Deutsche Schachzeitung chess magazine from 1865 to 1876, and from 1879 to 1886. In later life, he suffered mental and psychological problems. He threw himself under an electric train which cut off both his arms. He died a few days later.

Monte Carlo 1903

In 1903, Prince Andria Dadian of Mingrelia (1850-1910) was President of the Monte Carlo Tournament Committee. When Mikhail Chigorin of St. Petersburg showed up to play in the Monte Carlo International Tournament, Prince Dadian refuse to let him participate, even though Chigorin was invited and had already made the long journey from St Petersburg to Monte Carlo. Prince Dadian's demands were based on his claims that Chigorin embarrassed the prince in person and in print by publishing some analysis of one of the prince's games, pointing out that the prince had made several gross errors. Chigorin was not allowed to play, but he received compensation (1,500 francs paid by the prince) in the amount greater that the third prized in the tournament. Colonel Moreau of France played instead of Chigorin. Moreau then proceeded to lose every game (26 straight losses). Siegbert Tarrasch and Geza Maroczy tied for first at Monte Carlo. The winner was to receive a valuable art object as well, but the players wanted to play for money also. This annoyed the Prince, who gave the art object to the 3rd place finisher, Pillsbury. Prince Dadian was a member of the Mingrelian (Western Georgia) royal family. He graduated from Heidelberg Univeristy Faculty of Law in 1873 and server as a lieutenant general in the Russian army.

Moore, Jared

Jared Moore (1893-1995) was a chess player who lived to the age of 101. He was the oldest player to play correspondence chess. He was active in postal chess until he was 100 years old.

Moreau, Charles Paul Narcisse

Retired Colonel Charles Paul Narcisse Moreau (1837-1916) lost all 26 games at the Monte Carlo tournament in February-March, 1903. He was a French soldier serving in the artillery and an officer of the French Legion of Honor.

Morphy and Staunton Challenge

In early 1858, Paul Morphy, President of the New Orleans Chess Club, sent a challenge to Howard Staunton to visit New Orleans and play a chess match for a wager of $5,000 a side. The winner of the first 11 games would be the victor. Each move would have a time limit of 30 minutes. If Staunton should lose, he would still be allowed $1,000 to cover his expenses

Morton, Harold

Harold Morton was born in Providence, Rhode Island on January 10, 1906. He is a former champion of New England (1933). He won the Massachusetts Chess Championship in 1933, 1934, and 1935. He played in the 1936 US Chess Championship, but did poorly (15th-16th place). On February 17, 1940, he died in a car crash near Carroll, Iowa when he hit a truck. His fellow passenger, chess master I.A. Horowitz, survived, but was seriously injured with a concussion of the brain and other injuries. The two were giving simultaneous chess exhibitions throughout the country.

Moscow 1925

In 1925, an international super-tournament was held in Moscow. It was the world's first state-sponsored chess tournament. There were 11 foreign masters and 10 Soviet masters. The winner was Efim Bogoljubow, followed by Emanuel Lasker, Jose Capablanca, and Frank Marshall. Tens of thousands watched demonstration boards of the tournament throughout Moscow. The film Chess Fever used a number of scenes from this tournament. Psychologists tested the participants of the tournament and found that the top players only had an average performance in general tests of memory, attention, and thinking. But all of them were superior in memorizing positions of chessmen on the chessboard.

Mother-Daughter

Woman Grandmaster Naira Agababean of Moldavia is the mother of Woman Grandmaster and International Master Almira Skripchenko, who now lives in France. Former Women's World Champion Olga Rubtsova of Russia is the mother of Woman Grandmaster Elena Fatalibekova. Woman Grandmaster and International Master Cristina-Adela Foisor is the mother of Woman Grandmaster Sabina Francesca Foisor and Woman FIDE Master Mihaela-Veronica Foisor.

Mott, Henry

In 1863, Henry Mott organized a correspondence chess tournament with 128 players. This was the largest postal tournament until the 1940s. The tournament continued until mid-1867, but was never completed.

Muir, Walter

Walter Muir (1905-1999) played correspondence chess for 75 years.

Munoz, Jose Joaquin Araiza

Jose Joaquin Araiza Munoz (1900-1971) won the Mexican chess championship 15 times in succession. In 1932, he organized the first international chess tournament held in Mexico.

He took 3rd, behind Alexander Alekhine and Isaac Kashdan. He was a Captain in the Mexican army.

Myth and Chess

Mythical inventors of chess include Adam , Arabians, Aristotle, Attalus III Philometor (king of Pergamon from 138 BC to 133 BC) , Australian aborigines, Babylonians, Balhait, Bataks, Castilions, Chinese soldiers, Diomedes, Egyptians, Greeks, Hebrews in the third century, Hermes , Hindu counselor, Icelanders , Irish, Japhet, Jason, King Solomon, Knights of King Arthur’s Round Table, Kushan Empire of Central Asia, Lydus and Tyrrhenus, Meetaks, reign of Merodach, Moses, Palamedes, pygmies, Pythagoras, Romans, South American Indians (Araucanians), Scythians, Semiramis, Shatenscha, Shem, Ulysses, Welsh, wife of the king of Ceylon, Xerxes, and Zenobia.

NATO

Unofficial NATO chess tournaments were held in Denmark every year since May, 1978. In 1989, an official NATO Chess Championship was held in Hammelburg, Germany. The top American player that participated in several NATO championships was IM Emory Tate, an Air Force Sergeant at the time.

Neill, Benjamin Milnes

The Reverend B.M. Neill (1853-1922), of Philadelphia, was President of the Good Companion Chess Club from 1913 to 1922. He was one of the strongest chess players in the United States and was New England champion. In later life, he played in chess matches and tournaments under an assumed name. He published chess problems under the name of B. Milnes. He was a Methodist minister.

Netherlands Antilles

In February 1959, the Netherlands Antilles

Chess Federation, part of the Royal Netherlands Chess Federation, wrote a letter to their Dutch colleagues requesting that they inform FIDE that the Netherlands Antilles Chess Federation wanted to host the 1962 Candidates Tournament. The bid was accepted and the event was held at Curacao. It was the first Candidates’ Tournament outside Europe. Fischer took 4th place and accused the four Soviets of cheating by agreeing to draws with each other and saving their energy to defeat Fischer. Fischer was probably right. Petrosian scored 17.5. Keres and Geller scored 17 (Keres won a playoff for 2nd). Fischer score 14. Korchnoi score 13.5. Keres finished in 2nd place in 4 consecutive Candidates tournaments, but never played a match for the championship title. After the Curacao tournament, FIDE changed the format of the Candidates Tournament to a series of knockout matches. While in Curacao, Fischer visited a brothel. When asked later how he enjoyed it, he replied, “Chess is better.”

New York State Chess Association

The New York State Chess Association (NYSCA) is the oldest continuously-run chess organization, having been formed in 1878. It was then known as the “Western New York and Northern Pennsylvania Chess Association.” In 1884, it became known as the New York State Chess Association.

New Zealand

In September 1863, the Dunedin Chess Club was the first chess club formed in New Zealand. The New Zealand Chess Championship was first conducted in 1879. New Zealand has had an annual chess championship tournament since 1892. New Zealand was one of the earliest countries to make use of telegraphic interclub chess as a method of play. Ortvin Sarapu (1924-1999) won the New Zealand championship 20 times between 1952 and 1990.

Nimzowitsch, Aron

Aron Nimzowitsch (1886-1935) was the founder of the hypermodern movement in chess and author of My System. He would stand on his head during chess events and did exercises in the tournament room. After losing a game against Saemisch in Berlin, he jumped up on the table and yelled, “Why must I lost to this idiot?” He had business cards printed which read, ‘A. Nimzowitsch: Candidate for the World Championship of Chess and Crown Prince of the Chess World.” He once broke a leg while playing chess. He twisted his leg around the leg of his chair and then, having made his move, leaped up, only to crash to the floor in pain with a broken leg. In 1927, Nimzowitsch complained to tournament director Maroczy that Vidmar (Nimzowitsch’s best friend) had just pulled out some cigars and put it on the chess table. Maroczy asked why Nimzowitsch was so upset, since Vidmar had not started smoking anything. Nimzowitsch replied, “Yes, but the threat is more important than the execution.” He died of cancer at the age of 49. Some sources say that he died of syphilis, like Pillsbury. He was Russian champion in 1914 and Nordic champion in 1924 and 1934. In 1917, he was in the Baltic war zone and escaped force service by complaining that a fly was on his head. He then made his way to Berlin and changed his first name to Arnold as a precaution against anti-Semitism.

Nixdorff, Natalie

The first American Women’s Chess Congress was held at the Hotel Martha Washington in New York in May, 1906. It was won by Mrs. Natalie Nixdorff (1854-1937) of New York. She won every one of her games. She was born in Germany and came to the USA with her family at the age of 2. The women’s tournament only had 3 women in the championship section and 6 in the general tournament.

North America

The first mention of chess in North America occurred in 1641 according to Esther Singleton’s (1865-1930) book called “Dutch New York,” published in 1909. It described the early Dutch settlers in New York playing cards, chess, backgammon, and dice. However, in 1734, Benjamin Franklin (1706-1790) played the first reported chess game in North America.

O’Kelly de Galway, Alberic

Alberic O’Kelly de Galway (1911-1980) was a Belgian chess grandmaster and correspondence grandmaster. He won the Belgian chess championship 13 times between 1937 and 1959. He drew all his nine games at Beverwijk in 1957, drew seven out of nine at Beverwijk in 1958, and drew all nine games at Beverwijk in 1959. He was the chief arbiter of the world championship matches between Spassky and Petrosian in 1966 and 1969. He was fluent in 7 languages (French, Dutch, German, English, Spanish, Russian, and Italian).

Olympiad, Chess

The 1984 Chess Olympiad was supposed to be held in Indonesia, but they withdrew their support due to reduced oil revenues. It was finally held in Thessaloniki, Greece.

Ono, Yoko

In 1996, Yoko Ono (1933-) donated $2,500 to enable the Edward R. Murrow High School chess team in Brooklyn, New York, to attend the state and national championships. The school had been national champions in 1992, 1993, and 1994, but had no funds in 1995 and 1996. The school won the national championship in 2013, their 8th time winning it (1992, 1993, 1994, 2004, 2005, 2006, 2007, 2013). They have also won 15 state titles and 16 city championships. Yoko says she plays chess almost every day.

Oxford University

During the Middle Ages, chess was outlawed at Oxford University in England. It was called “noxious, inordinate and dishonest,” according to National Geographic.

Pauly, Wolfgang

Wolfgang Pauly (1876-1934) was the greatest chess problemist of Romania. He composed about 2,500 chess problems during his lifetime. He was also an amateur astronomer who discovered a comet, now named the Pauly comet. In 2001, Marian Stere wrote Wolfgang Pauly: Challenge of a Legacy. The book is 736 pages with 1,350 diagrams. The current Romanian parliament was built over Pauly’s old house.

Pavey, Max

In his exhibition at the Brooklyn Library in 1951, Max Pavey played 13 games with different opponents without losing one. He drew two games against Edmar Mednis, a junior member of the Marshall Chess Club, and Sylvan Katske. The other 11, including eight-year-old Bobby Fischer, were defeated.

Penquite, John

The highest rated USCF correspondence player was John Penquite at 2933 (won 58 games straight, no losses, and no draws).

Phillips, Harold

Harold Meyer Phillips (1874-1967) was a lawyer and President of the United States Chess Federation (USCF) from 1950-54, President of the Manhattan Chess Club, President of the Intercollegiate Chess League, former New York State Champion and Manhattan Chess Club Champion (1902). Harold Phillips was born in Lithuania. In 1887, he arrived in New York. In 1892, he entered City College of New York (CCNY) and won the college chess championship.

In 1896, he entered Columbia University Law School and was its top chess player. He was the organizer and director of the great New York 1924 International Tournament. In 1930, he was team manager and played 3rd board for the U.S. in the Chess Olympiad at Hamburg (drawing one and losing one). He played in chess tournaments for over 70 years. In his earlier years, he was known as “Der Kleine Morphy.” In his later years, he was known as the Grand Old Man of Chess. In 1941 he was organizer and president of the Intercollegiate Chess League. He died at the age of 92.

Pilnik, Herman

In his long trip by air from Buenos Aires to Dallas, Herman Pilnik of Argentina lost his plane priorities to Los Angeles. In an effort to get to Hollywood for the Pan American Congress, he proceeded by automobile and the car crashed into a parked and unlighted truck near El Centro, California. Pilnik woke up in a hospital, where he was cared for two days. He showed up with a thoroughly bandaged head.

Pleci, Isaias

Isaias Pleci (1907-1979) was an Argentine International Master (1965). He was Argentine Champion in 1929, 1930, and 1932. He represented Argentina in three Chess Olympiads (1935, 1937, 1939). In 1939, he won the individual gold medal at the 8th Chess Olympiad in Buenos Aires with 14 wins, 2 draws, and 3 losses. His nickname was Tank.

Poland

The oldest Polish chess club is the Cracow Chess Club, established in 1893. The first Polish championship took place in 1926 and won by Dawid Przepiorka. The second Polish championship was held in 1927 and won by Akiba Rubinstein. The third Polish championship did not occur until 1935, which was won by Dr. Saveilly Tartakower.

Pope Leo XIII

Pope Leo XIII (1810-1903) was a remarkably good chess player. In fact, it is only on rare occasions that he was ever defeated in a game. There was only one priest in Rome who was usually the pope’s adversary. This priest, Father Giella, played chess with his holiness for 32 years. When Cardinal Pecci was raised to the papal throne, Father Giella, who was then residing in Florence, received an invitation to proceed to Rome and take up quarters in the Vatican. He was a magnificent player, but so hot tempered that the pope often improved the occasion by a little homily on the virtues of resignation and meekness.

Portisch, Lajos

Lajos Portisch (born April 4, 1937) holds the record for most career victories in the Chess Olympiads – 121. He participated in a record 20 Olympiads from 1956 to 2000.

Post, Ehrhardt

In 1942, Ehrhardt Post (1881-1947), Chief Executive of the Nazi chess federation, intended to bring together the 6 strongest players of Germany and the occupied and neutral European countries in an international tournament at Salzburg, Austria. He was able to get Alekhine, Paul Keres, Paul Schmidt, Efim Bogoljubov, and Gosta Stoltz. Max Euwe was invited, but he withdrew due to “illness” (Euwe refused to play because Alekhine was invited). Euwe was replaced by Klaus Junge. Alekhine won the event with 7.5 out of 10. No wartime tournament book about Salzburg was ever published.

Przepiorka, David

David Przepiorka (1880-1940) was a Polish chess master who was the first Polish chess champion (1926 - Warsaw). He played in two chess Olympiads for Poland (1930 and 1931). He was editor of the Polish chess magazine Swiat Szachowy and one of the richest men in Warsaw. In 1940 he was arrested by the Germans at a Warsaw chess club and was killed in a mass execution at a concentration camp outside Warsaw.

Quevedo, Leonardo Torres y

In 1912, the Spanish civil engineer and mathematician Leonardo Torres y Quevedo (1852-1936) created an analog computer that could play a simple endgame of chess (pictured). He dubbed the chess automaton El Ajedrecista (The Chessplayer). It was able to automatically play a king and rook endgame against king from any position, without any human intervention. It is considered the world’s first computer game. Mechanical arms moved the pieces until 1920, when he used electromagnets under the chess board to move the pieces.

Rahl (Rall), Johan Gottlieb

British commander (Colonel) of the Hessians (mercenary troops from Germany employed by the British) in Trenton, New Jersey when George Washington crossed the Delaware River with his army and attacked on December 26, 1776. Col Rahl (or Rall) had 1,500 soldiers and Washington had over 2,400 men. Rahl and 40 others in his army were killed during the battle. The Americans had two killed, two wounded (one of them was James Monroe) and three that were frozen to death. Washington’s army at Trenton included James Madison, James Monroe, John Marshall, Aaron Burr, and Alexander Hamilton. Earlier, an outlaw named Moses Doan observed Washington’s army was on the move and surmised that their intention was to surprise the British and Hessians at Trenton. He delivered a note (“Washington is coming on you down the river. He will be here afore long ...Doan”) informing Col Rahl that Washington was about to cross the Delaware. Col Rahl received the note, but was annoyed at being interrupted from his chess game, and put the note in his vest pocket. The unread note was found on Rahl’s body the next day. This story has been repeated in various sources. Moses Doan was later shot while robbing a house. Governor Rodman Price (1916-1894), who was governor of New Jersey from 1854 to 1857, repeated this story in his speeches while governor. Emanuel Lasker wrote an article of Colonel Rahl and the chess theme in his Lasker’s Chess Magazine Volume 7

(Nov 1907-April 1908). Gerald Abrahams mentioned this story in his book Not Only Chess, published in 1974. The story has been repeated, except that Col Rahl was at a card party, not playing chess. Rahl was born in 1720.

Reshevsky, Samuel

Samuel Reshevsky (1911-1992) played 9 decades of championship chess. Reshevsky played 11 of the first 12 world chess champions. He never played Kasparov. He defeated seven world champions – Lasker, Capablanca, Alekhine, Euwe, Botvinnik, Smyslov, and Fischer. Samuel Rzeschewski, his original name, was a nine-year-old chess marvel, who defeated 21 of Europe’s foremost players at the same sitting, when he came to the United States. He was accompanied by his father, a wealthy linen merchant of Lodz, Poland, and his physician, Dr. Rosen. He was met by his manager, Max Rosenthal. During the voyage over on the Olympic, he played 11 opponents from the passenger list, including one blindfold game, and he won all his games in an hour.

Richter, Kurt Paul Otto Joseph

Kurt Richter (1900-1969) was German International Master (1950) and chess writer. He won the Berlin Chess Championship in 1922 and 1948. He won the German championship in 1935. His nickname was Der Scharfrichter von Berlin (executioner of Berlin). From 1953 to 1969 he wrote over 300 chess articles, thtle “Lessons in Chess,” with some 3,600 diagrams for Schach magazine.

Robespierre

One evening, when Robespierre was sitting in the Café de la Regence during the French Reign of Terror, a young person entered the cafe, and unceremoniously installing himself at his table, moved a man on the chess-board which stood in front of Robespierre, who responded to the move. The game went on and was lost by the latter. They began a second game, which he likewise lost. Seeing this, Robespierre felt his honor engaged, and inquired for what stake they were playing. “For the head of a man,” the lad replied. “I have won it; give it to me.” Robespierre drew from his pocket a sheet of paper and wrote an order to set at liberty the Comte de R——, then imprisoned in the Conciergerie. The young lad, it seems, was really a lady in disguise, and was no other than the Comte’s bride.

Roosevelt, George Emlen

George Roosevelt (1887-1963) was an investment banker and philanthropist and cousin of U.S. President Theodore Roosevelt. He was a strong chess amateur. He was President of the Marshall Chess Club in 1938 and remained president for several years.

Roosevelt, Kermit

Kermit Roosevelt (1889-1943) was the son of U.S. President Theodore Roosevelt and an avid chess set collector. His chess set collection was on display at the 1933 World’s Fair in Chicago. His chess set collection went up for auction in 1968.

Rubinstein, Akiba

Akiba Kiwelowicz Rubinstein (1880-1961) was a Polish chess Grandmaster. He was the youngest of 12 children. 10 of his brothers and sisters died of tuberculosis during his childhood. He learned chess at the late age of 19. In 1914, he was scheduled to play Emanuel Lasker for the world chess championship, signing a contract, but it was cancelled because of the outbreak of World War I. He was plagued with mental illness and suffered from extreme agoraphobia (a fear of people and society). He claimed he studied chess six hours a day, 300 days a year. Another 60 days he spent playing in chess tournaments. The remaining five days he rested. He never ate in public and would not shake hands for fear of germs. He was so paranoid that if a stranger came to his door, he would exit out the window. In 1912 he won five consecutive strong tournaments in one year (Vilna, San Sebastian, Breslau, Pistyan, and Warsaw), a record which has never been surpassed. During World War I, like Lasker, he invested all his money in German War bonds. He beat Capablanca, Alekhine, and Emanuel Lasker the first time he played them in tournament play. In 1912 at San Sebastian he complained of a fly which kept settling on his forehead and breaking his concentration. After he won the tournament, the tournament director, Jacques Mieses, took him to a leading psycho-neurologist at Munich. The doctor examined Rubinstein and said, “My friend, you are mad. But what does it matter? You are a chess master!” Rubinstein imagined noises in the night: knockings on the walls. He once burst in the room next door and tried to strangle Richard Reti, believing he was the source of these strange noises. After 1932, he never competed in chess tournaments again. He spent four years hiding in a sanatorium in Belgium during the Nazi occupation. He learned chess at the late age of 19.

Russ, William Henry

W.E. Henry was the pseudonym of William Henry Russ (1833-1866). He compiled a manuscript of all chess problems published in America (over 4,000). He adopted a 11-year-old girl and proposed to her when she was 21. She rejected the offer so he shot her in the head four times, and then shot himself in the head twice. She survived, he did not. His book, posthumously published, was called American Chess Nuts (1868).

Ruth, William Allen

William Ruth (1886-1975) was a chess master from New Jersey and Philadelphia. In 1934, he won the New Jersey State Championship. He was the Pennsylvania champion 6 times. He took last place in the 1945 US Championship (+1-7=2). The opening 1.d4 Nf6 2.Bg5 is sometimes known as the Ruth Opening, but more commonly named the Trompowsky Opening.

San Sebastian 1911

One of the strongest chess tournaments ever held, played at the Gran Casino in San Sebastian, Spain. 15 chess masters were invited based on a previous tournament result. Every participant had won either 1st or 2nd place in a master tournament, or two or more 3rd and 4th places. This was 22-year-old Jose Capablanca’s first European tournament. He was invited after defeating Frank Marshall in a match. Initially, Ossip Bernstein (and Aron Nimzowitsch) had objected about Capablanca’s inclusion in the tournament based on one match victory. Capablanca then defeated Bernstein in the first round and went on to win the tournament. First place was 5,000 francs. Capablanca also won the 500 franc Rothschild brilliancy prize for his win over Bernstein. The tournament was organized by Jacquess Mieses. It was the first time that all the expenses of the masters were paid.

The Scottish Chess Association (SCA) is the oldest chess association in the world, founded on February 2, 1884. It is now called Chess Scotland. The first Scottish chess champion was John Crum (1842-1922) of Glasgow in 1884. Crum was a noted endgame composer and edited a chess column in The Glasgow Weekly Herald.

Sharp, Sydney Thomas

Sydney Sharp (1885-1953) learned chess from his father at age 15. Sharp won the Pennsylvania chess championship 10 times (1908, 1913, 1915, 1916, 1921, 1924, 1925, 1930, 1932, 1937).

Sheets, Jacob L.

Jacob Sheets (1904-1980) was the winner of the first Washington State chess championship, in 1932. He won the Washington State championship in 1932, 1933, 1936, 1940, 1942, 1947, and 1954.

Shinkman, William Anthony

William Shinkman (1847-1933) was known as the “Wizard of Grand Rapids.” He was born in Bohemia and came to the United States at age 7. He was the most prolific of American problemists and composed chess problems for over 60 years, and, next to Sam Loyd, was America’s greatest chess composer. He published about 4,000 problems in his lifetime. He was an insurance, estate broker, and City Clerk of Grand Rapids, Michigan. His nephew was Otto Wurzburg, another chess problemist. He died at the age of 86.

Ships

In 1853, two ships, the Barham and the Wellesley, played a correspondence game while sailing from Calcutta to London. They used optical signaling systems between them to make their moves. In August 1902, a game was played by wireless radio between the S.S. Philadelphia and the S.S. Campania in the Atlantic Ocean.

Showalter, Jackson Whipps

In 1890 Jackson Whipps Showlater (1860-1935) won the United States Chess Association’s 3rd Annual Congress Championship tournament in St. Louis. Shortly after this tournament in 1890, he lost a match to Max Judd by a score of 7-3. In 1892 he defeated Judd by the score of 7-4. In 1894 he defeated Albert Hodges by the score of 8-6. Later in 1894 Showalter lost to Hodges in a return match with a score of 5-3. In 1895 Showalter defeated Simon Lipschuetz, Emil Kemeny, John Barry, and Adolf Albin in matches. In 1897 Showalter lost to Harry Pillsbury by the score of 9.5-11.5. In 1898, Showalter lost a return match with Pillsbury by the score of 4-8. In 1909 Showalter lost to Frank Marshall by a score of 3.5-18.5. He was an accomplished baseball pitcher and is considered one of the inventors of the curve ball. He was the first man in Kentucky to pitch a curve ball. His nickname was the Kentucky Lion. He died at his home in Georgetown, Kentucky on February 5, 1935 on his birthday. He had just turned 75 that day.

Southard, Elmer Ernest

Elmer Southard (1876-1920) was an American neuropsychiatrist and neuropathologist. While studying at Harvard, he distinguished himself as a chess player. In an 1899 newspaper article covering an Ivy League chess tournament, Southard was described as Harvard’s best chess player. His record in college for four years (1895-1898) playing against the other Ivy League colleges was 24-0. The Danvers opening, 1.e4 e5 2.Qh5 (also called the Parham opening), was originated by him during the period 1906-1909, when he was assistant physician and pathologist in the Danvers State Hospital for the Insane in Massachusetts. He died of pneumonia at the age of 44.

Stanley, Charles Henry

Charles Henry Stanley (1819-1901) was the first chess champion of the United States. He arrived in New York from England in 1842 and worked at the British Consulate. On March 1, 1845, he wrote America’s first chess column in the newspaper, The Spirit of the Times. The chess column ran until October 1848. One of his articles contained the first chess problem published in America. In December 1845, Stanley defeated Eugene Rousseau at the New Orleans Chess Club (Sazerac Coffee House) and thus claimed the title of the first unofficial U.S. Champion. He earned $1,000 for his efforts (over $31,000 in 2014 dollars) This was the first organized chess event in the United States. In October 1846, he started the American Chess Magazine: a periodical Organ of Communication for American Chess Players. The magazine folded in September 1847. In 1846, he published the first U.S. book on a chess match, called 31 Games of Chess. In 1855 he organized the first World Chess Problem tournament. His daughter, Pauline (born in December 1857), was named after Paul Morphy. He was an alcoholic who spent his last 20 years in institutions on Ward’s Island and in the Bronx.

Steinitz, William

In 1897, the press falsely reported Steinitz’s death. The headline of the Indianapolis News was “William Steinitz Dead.” A dispatch from Moscow says that William Steinitz died in a private hospital, where he had recently been placed on account of mental disorder. He died in 1900.

Stolzenberg, Leon (1895-1974)

Leon Stolzenberg (1895-1974) was the winner of the Western Chess Association (US Open) chess tournament in 1926 and 1928. He won the Michigan State Championship 13 times. He won the US Open Postal Chess Championship (Golden Knights) three times. He died 7 days after his 79th birthday.

Sturgis, George

George Sturgis was born in Boston, Massachusetts on May 31, 1891. In February 1933, he was elected president of the Massachusetts State Chess Association (MSCA). He was the first President of the United States Chess Federation (USCF), elected in 1939. He died on December 20, 1944 in Boston after returning from his honeymoon. The George Sturgis Memorial Trophy, donated by Mrs. E.R. Thayer, was presented to all the U.S. Open winners from 1945 to 1963.

Sultan Kahn, Mir

Mir Sultan Kahn (1905-1966) was the winner of the All Indian championship and winner of the Championship of the British Empire several times (1929, 1932, and 1933). He was the strongest chess master of his time from Asia. He was illiterate and had to learn the rules of chess in Europe, which were different than Eastern chess (pawns could only move one square at a time, for example). He couldn’t speak English and had to have an attendant write down his score. He was a servant in the household of Colonel Umar Khan, an army officer in charge of the horses for King George V. He defeated Capablanca, Nimzovich, Rubinstein, Tartakower, Flohr and other top players. He returned to India with his master, living the rest of his life as a farmer.

Szabo, Laszlo

Laszlo Szabo (1917-1998) was a Hungarian Grandmaster (1950) and former Candidate for the World Chess Championship. He was born in Budapest, Hungary on March 19, 1917. Szabo was a National Master by the time he was 17. He won the first official Hungarain championship in 1935 at the age of 18. He won the Hungarian championship eight times (1935, 1937, 1946, 1950, 1952, 1954, 1959, 1967), and tied for first, but lost the play-off on two other occasions. In 1938-39, he won at Hastings. Before World War II, he worked in the foreign exchange department of a Budapest bank. During World War II, he was in a Hungarian Forced Labor unit where he was captured by the Russian army. He was a prisoner of war until after the end of World War II. After the war, he was editor of the Hungarian national chess magazine. Szabo was the leading Hungarian chess player from 1945 to 1960, when Portisch became Hungary’s leading player. In 1945, he took 2nd place in a tournament in Kecskemet and won 10 kilograms of lard. In 1946, he tied for 4th, with Najdorf, at Groningen. In 1947-48, he won at Hastings. In 1948, he won an international tournament in Budapest, ahead of Gligoric, Foltys, Pachman, and Tartakower. In 1949-50, he won at Hastings. He became an International Arbiter in 1954. He played on 11 Hungarian Chess Olympiad teams from 1935 to 1968. He participated in three Interzonals (1948, 1952, 1955), taking 2nd in 1948. He participated in three Candidates’ tournaments (1950, 1953, 1956), finishing joint third in 1956. In 1979, he retired from active chess play. In 1981, he wrote 100,000 Moves in 50 Years. In 1986, he wrote, My Best Games. He died on August 8, 1998.

Tal, Mikhail

In 1966, during the Palma de Mallorca, Spain chess tournament, Mikhail Tal became the first Russian to oppose a bull in a bull-fighting arena.

Tarrasch, Siegbert

Siegbert Tarrasch (1862-1934) of Germany was one of the strongest chess players in the world. He was born in Breslau, the native city of Adolf Anderssen. He learned to play chess at the age of 16. He was Jewish who converted to Christianity, but still faced anti-Semitism in Germany. In 1885, he became a medical doctor, later specializing in hypnosis in Munich, Germany. In 1908, he was the challenger for the world chess champion, but lost to Emanuel Lasker. One of his sons died in battle at the start of World War I. In 1918, he won a chess match in which the prize was a kilogram of butter. Tarrasch coined the phrase, amaurosis scacchistica, or chess blindness.

Tartakower, Savielly

Georges Cartier was the pseudonym for Dr. Savielly Tartakower (1887-1956) during World War II when he was a 2nd Lieutenant in the Free French forces in London serving under Charles De Gaulle. The pseudonym had nothing to do with military secrecy – everyone knew Tartakower. The name was used because Savielly Tartakower was too hard to say and pronounce by his Free French colleagues. During World War I, he was a Lieutenant in the Austrian army and was shot in the stomach. He wrote over 20 books of chess that have appeared in English, German, French, Russian, Hungarian, and Spanish.

Tatai, Stefano

The Italian Chess Federation refused to allow one of its best players, Stefano Tatai (1938-), to play on the 1982 Italian Olympiad team. Tatai was 44 and seven time national champion. The Italian Chess Federation only wanted members that were age 30 or younger to represent Italy. The result was a very poor showing at the Chess Olympiad in Lucerne (42nd place).

Telegraph

On November 14, 1844, chess was played over the telegraph for the first time between Baltimore and Washington, DC. Baltimore won. On July 19, 1858, the first Australian telegraph match was played, between the Hobart Town chess club and George Town chess club. On October 26, 1861, the first telegraph match played by submarine cable took place between Liverpool and Dublin. The final result of the match is unknown. In 1896, during the Lasker – Steinitz return match, played in Moscow, Steinitz had arranged to telegraph the moves of the games to the United States. Before he could do so, he had to submit his chess moves to the Russian Government, and had to convince the authorities that there were no secret messages being sent.

Telephone

In 1877, chess was first played using the telephone. The first documented telephone chess game is from Dr. White and Mr. Treadwell of New York. Treadwell won. In 1878, Hugh Baker of Hamilton, Ontario connected his home with homes of several of his friends so that they could play chess over the phone without leaving home. From this private line grew the first Canadian telephone system.

Thomas, George Alan

Sir George Alan Thomas (1881-1972) was the British chess champion in 1923 and 1934, 7-time British badminton champion (he won 21 British badminton titles between 1903 and 1928 and over 400 first prizes), and quarter-finalist tennis player at Wimbledon (1922). He played at Wimbledon from 1919 to 1926. He was born in Constantinople. His mother, Lady Edith Thomas, who taught him chess, was the winner of the first British women’s chess championship at Hastings in 1895. He was on the winning tennis doubles team championship at Wimbledon in 1919. In 1946 he won the London chess championship at the age of 65. He won the City of London Chess Club Championship 16 times. He was also an internationally ranked hockey, squash and table-tennis player. He finished tied for first at Hastings, ahead of Capablanca, Botvinnik, and Lilienthal, all three of whom he defeated. He was the founder of the International Badminton Federation and its president for 21 years. He captained England at three different games – badminton, chess, and tennis. He became “Sir George” when he succeeded his father, Sir George Sidney Meade Thomas, as the 7th Baronet in 1918. In 1950, he was awarded the International Master title. In 1952, he was awarded the International Judge title.

Turner, Abe

Theodore Smith, age 38, was arrested in the slaying of a 280-pound master chess player, whose body was found stuffed in a walk-in wall safe of a basement laboratory on Manhattan’s upper West Side. The victim, Abe Turner, 38, had been stabbed 9 times. Turner did general office work for “Chess Review” magazine. He had been stabbed in a hallway of the building and his body dragged to a basement laboratory used by a doctor who has an office on the front floor. Smith was a clerk-typist with “Chess Review.” He admitted to the slaying and said he threw away the knife in Central Park

Tylor, Theodore Henry

Sir Theodore Henry Tyler (1900-1968) was British Correspondence Champion from 1932, 1933, and 1934. For nearly 40 years, he was a Fellow and tutor in jurisprudence at Oxford. He was legally blind his whole life. He studied at Oxford University beginning in 1918, and captained the Oxford University Chess Club. He competed in 12 British Chess Championships. In 1930, he represented England at the Hamburg Chess Olympiad, perhaps the first blind person to participate in a Chess Olympiad. He was 2nd in the 1933 British championship, behind Mir Sultan Khan. In 1965, he was knighted for his service to organizations for the blind. He was President of the Royal National Institution for the Blind.

In 1847-48, the first known correspondence chess match between universities occurred. It was a match between the Hermes Club at Oxford University and Trinity College Cambridge. Oxford won.

USA

The first time the USA finished first-second in an international event was the Portimao, Portugal International Tournament in 1975. GM Larry Evans (1932-2010) took first place, followed by IM Norman Weinstein (1950-).

U.S. Amateur Team

In 2012, the U.S. Amateur Team – East tournament had 294 teams, the biggest team tourney in the world.

U.S. Open

The U.S. Open in chess started in 1900 (held in Excelsior, Minnesota and won by Louis Uedemann). It is one of the earliest U.S. Opens and was designed as a late summer vacation for chess players. The U.S. Open in tennis started in 1881. The U.S. Open in golf started in 1895. The U.S. Open in surfing started in 1959. The U.S. Open in bowling started in 1971. The U.S. Open in poker started in 1996. In 1940, the first U.S. Open chess tournament was held in Dallas and won by Reuben Fine. Prior to 1940, the U.S. Open was known as the North American Open. Prior to the North American Open (organized by the American Chess Feeration), it was known as the Western Open (organized by the Western Chess Association).

USSR

In 1949, 125,000 players competed for the championship of the USSR collective farms. At the time, the USSR Chess Federation had over a million members. By 1962, it had 2.5 million members.

USSR Absolute Championship (1941)

In 1939, the Soviet Union annexed the Baltic States of Latvia, Lithuania, Estonia, and the eastern parts of Poland. That meant that chess players from these countries could play in the Soviet Chess Championship. In 1940, the 12th Soviet Championship has held in Moscow. The top 6 players were Igor Bondarevsky, Andre Lilienthal, Vasily Smyslov, Paul Keres, Mikhail Botvinnik, and Isaac Boleslavsky. Botvinnik complained of the conditions of the tournament and suggested that a match-tournament of the top 6 players from the 12th Soviet Championship would be a fairer determination of the best Soviet player, with the winner being the official challenger for Alexander Alekhine’s world championship title. So the match-tournament was held in Leningrad and Moscow, with the winner being Botvinnik. Two months after the tournament, Nazi Germany attacked the Soviet Union, thus cancelling the world championship match between Botvinnik and Alekhine.

Van Oosterom, Joop J.

Joop J. van Oosterom of the Netherlands is a billionaire and perhaps the richest correspondence player. He was the 18th and 21st World Correspondence Chess Champion.

Vaughan, Stan

In 1988, Stan Vaughan played 1,124 correspondence games at once. A record. He broke Robert Wyller’s record of 1,001 correspondence games played in 1948.

Von Massow

In 1983, Hans-Wereer von Massow initiated the Bertl von Massow Medal for distinguished service to international correspondence chess. It was in memory of his wife, Bertl, who was a great supporter and worker for the International Correspondence Chess Federation (ICCF). They are awarded for 15 years (gold) and 10 years (silver) of faithful service to the ICCF.

Washington, George

At a meeting of the New Jersey Historical Society at Newark, New Jersey, Governor Price, in response to a toast, made a speech, in which he related the following anecdote: “On the day preceding the night on which General Washington had determined to cross the Delaware and attack the British in Trenton, and Englishman in the neighborhood dispatched his son with a note to General Rahl, to warn him of approaching danger. The General being deeply absorbed in a game of chess when the note was presented, without withdrawing his attention from the game, he thoughtlessly put the note in his vest pocket. After the battle next day, when General Rahl was brought in mortally wounded, the note was found unread in his pocket.”

Western Chess Association (WCA)

Founded in 1900, it became known as the American Chess Federation (ACF) in 1935. Throughout its first quarter century, the WCA restricted its annual championship to “Western” players, west of Pennsylvania. In 1925, all restrictions were removed and the WCA welcomed its first players and champions from New York as it made plans to become a fully national organization.

Whitaker, Norman Tweed

Norman Whitaker (1890-1975) was a lawyer with three law degrees and International Master (1965 at age 75). He learned chess from his father at age 14. He was Intercollegiate Champion of the U.S. From 1915 to 1931 he was quite active (President and Champion) in the Western Chess Association. In 1920 he played the first shortwave radio match in the U.S. in a match against Ed Lasker. In 1921, he was the top American in the 8th American Chess Congress. In 1922, he was Assistant Secretary of the Interior. He tied for the U.S. Open Championship in 1923 and 1930. In 1927 he won the first National Chess Federation Championship. In 1928 he was on his way to the World Amateur Championship in The Hague to play the champions of 15 other nations (won by Euwe). He was also on his honeymoon. He was involved in a train wreck that killed 9 persons in his car and his wife’s skull was fractured. Whitaker still played, and took 4th place. In 1950 he won the Southern Championship. In 1932, he received $100,000 from Charles Lindbergh on a promise to return the Lindbergh baby. It was a scam in which he went to prison for five years. The money was never found. He served several other prison sentences for other scams. He spent 18 months in Alcatraz. As soon as he got out, he traveled to Corpus Christ, Texas to participate in the US Open Chess Championship, which he almost won. He was a member of the Log Cabin Chess Club, playing Board 1 (Bobby Fischer played Board 2). He won over 200 tournaments in his lifetime and very seldom did he accept any cash prizes.

Wiener, Norbert

Norbert Wiener (1894-1964) was an American mathematician (he taught at MIT for over 40 years) and founder of cybernetics. In his 1948 book Cybernetics or Control and Communication in the Animal and the Machine, he describes how a chess program could be developed using a depth-limited minimax search with an evaluation function. He described himself as a poor chess player.

Whitaker, Norman

Norman Whitaker, who later became an international master, was an imprisoned lawyer companion of FBI agent Gaston B. Means, convicted of swindling Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean of $104,000 on the pretense of recovering the kidnapped Lindbergh baby. In 1934, he attempted to bargain for his freedom by telling where the money is hidden. Whitaker also is said to have declared that Means knows the “inside story” of the Lindbergh kidnapping.

World Championship Match, 1927

The entire world championship match between Alekhine and Capablanca in 1927 took place behind closed doors in Buenos Aires, Argentina. There were no spectators or photographs. The match lasted for over 2 months with 34 games played. 32 of the 34 games was a Queen’s Gambit. Alekhine won with 6 wins, 3 losses, and 25 draws.

World Championship Match, 1986

The purse from the 1986 Karpov-Kasparov world championship chess match ($900,000), held in London and Leningrad, was donated to the victims of the Chernobyl nuclear accident that occurred in 1986. It was later learned that much of the money was siphoned off by the Ministry of Industry to recover losses of factories. Later, the Soviet Peace Fund, under Karpov’s leadership, sponsored a telethon that raised nearly $5 million that went directly to the victims of Chernobyl.

World War II

The Japanese confiscated chess books from prisoners during World War II, thinking they were military codes. During World War II, The US military did not allow servicemen overseas to play chess by mail due to censorship restrictions.

Wurzburg, Otto B

Otto Wurzburg (1875-1951) was an American chess composer and nephew of another chess composer, W.A. Shinkman. Wurzburg composed more than 1,200 problems in three or more moves. He was the first problem editor of Chess Review magazine. The cover of the first issue of Chess Review in January, 1933, featured a chess problem (White mates in 2 moves) composed by Wurzburg. He was a postal worker in Grand Rapids, Michigan.

Yusuf

In 1408 Prince Yusuf of Grenada was ordered slain by his brother, Sultan Muhammad VII (1370-1408), but was granted his last request – permission to finish a game of chess. The sultan died while the game was in progress, and his condemned brother became Yusuf III (1408-1423), King of Grenada.

Zukertort

Dr. J. H. Zukertort died in London on June 20, 1888 after a short illness. He appeared to be enjoying very good health on Tuesday evening, when he played at Simpson’s. Suddenly he became ill there, and was taken to the British Chess Club, King-street, Covent-garden. Mr. Gunsberg thought it advisable to remove him to Charingcross Hospital, where he was found to be unconscious. There were no appearances of Dr. Zukertort’s having been the victim of any chronic disease. His death is attributed to a sudden attack of apoplexy.
